President Leads Nation in Showing Gratitude by Gift For Foreign Relief

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Anthems bright as the morning echoed the spirit of Washington worshipers at Thanksgiving services yesterday.

But with the music and the prayers of thanks went a crossbeat of reminders about world troubles, especially hunger.

President Truman went with his wife and daughter, Margaret, to join 1000 other persons in services at the First Baptist Church.

They heard the Rev. Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden preach a buoyant sermon on the theme "Perpetual Thanksgiving," in which he declared at one point "thanks giving is the secret of one's peace of mind."

The money President Truman and the others put into the collection plates was destined for world relief.

Sheen Advances Peace Plan

Flags of many lands decorated St. Patrick's Catholic Church as Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen urged a five-point program among Pan American people to maintain world peace.

Chief Justice of the United States and Mrs. Fred Vinson and Postmaster General and Mrs. Robert E. Hannegan were in the congregation. President Truman was represented by White House Secretaries Charles G. Ross and Eben Ayres.

Monsignor Sheen, Catholic University philosophy professor, spoke to 1500 worshipers, including diplocats of this and other countries, in the annual Pan America Mass.

The five-point plan was

1. Realization "that no anti-Communist attitude, however strong, will save either Europe or the world."

2. Recognition "that never before in history has the cause of democracy and Christianity been so nearly identical."

3. That "the Pan American nations with Christian insight, which makes a distinction between the sin and the sinner, will also make a distinction between an ideology and a people."

Make Law Supreme in U. N.

4. Since "the Pan American nations are unconsciously drawn into the defense of Christian values they will seek a reorganization of the United Nations in order to give supremacy to law over power."

5. Recognition "that the evil that threatens the world is to a great extent of our own making."

At the first Baptist services, Dr. Pruden struck a light note toward the close of his sermon when he relayed to the President and the congregation the words he had heard earlier in the day from a

'Death Sentence,' Curley Cried at Six-Month Term

"It's a sentence of death," Mayor James M. Curley of Boston cried out in Federal District Court here last June 27, when he was ordered to serve a term of 6 to 18 months in prison for mail fraud.

His attorneys, William E. Leahy and Nicholas J. Chase, pleaded vainly with Justice James M. Proctor to suspend the sentence, saying that Curley, former Representative in Congress, was suffering from high blood pressure, diabetes, cystitis and was in imminent danger of cerebral hemorrhages.

Justice Proctor ordered that Curley "should go to jail today."

Yesterday the Mayor was back in Boston after serving five months of his sentence, commuted by President Truman.

"I come back to work 10 years younger," he told Associated Press and other reporters. "I'll go back to work better physically, mentally and spiritually."

He will resume the office of mayor today.

Has Your Post Carrier Visited You Lately?

Your Washington Post carrier visits you every day, seven days a week . . . but unless you're an exceptionally early riser, chances are you only see him once a month—when he comes to collect. Next time, and each time he calls, have his money ready for him the first time he visits you.

Most people have no trouble at all getting paid—just a matter of standing in a pay-line a few minutes, or waiting till a check is handed or mailed to you, on time, always. Not so with your Washington Post carrier, who must make many, many calls to get his pay. Collection is the most time-consuming part of his job. Why not try and make his job easier by having his money ready for him the first time he calls?

'War Frauds' Tips Pour In To Committee

All to Be Investigated, Says Ferguson, Giving Assurance of Secrecy

By The Associated Press

Dozens of letters charging irregularity and fraud in Government war contracts are showering down on a Senate War Investigating subcommittee as the result of the Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers case, Chairman Ferguson (R., Mich.) disclosed yesterday.

"All of them will be investigated, you can rest assured on that," Ferguson told a reporter. "We are sending them to the FBI, other Senate committes, and to any Government agencies involved."

Ferguson said some of the letters are signed and some anonymous. Some signed by officers still in the armed services ask the Senate investigators to keep the names confidential, expressing fear of recrimination.

"This will be done," Ferguson promised.

Grand Jury Meets Monday

The Justice Department is presenting to a Federal grand jury here charges arising from the committee's investigation of Meyers, during which witnesses testified he owned and took profits of at least $150,000 from an aircraft parts plant while serving as deputy chief of Air Force purchasing.

The grand jury is in recess until Monday.

The possibility of a drive in the Senate to extend the life of its special War Investigating Committee developed yesterday, with members citing the Meyers case as justification for keeping the unit going.

General Meyers, as a result of the Senate committee's investigation faces the prospect of court-martial, criminal prosecution, and tax evasion charges, as well as loss of his disability pay and his military honors.

Due to End February 1

The committee, first headed by President Truman when he was a Senator, is scheduled to close up shop February 1, and Chairman Brewster (R., Me.) has stated he had no plans to ask for an extension.

That, however, was before the committee struck pay dirt digging into Meyers' wartime dealings as an Air Force procurement officer. Brewster is in Europe and has not said whether he has changed his mind about seeking additional life for the investigating body.

But Senator Cain (R., Wash.), a

Exhibit to Be Open For Second Day at D. C.'s Union Station

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Thousands of Washingtonians patiently braved the cold weather for hours yesterday for the privilege of visiting the Freedom Train at Union Station.

The price of admission was a long wait, chill-nipped toes, and frost-pinched ears.

In return, those lucky enough to get inside the rolling treasure house of American liberty before the 10 p. m. deadline got 20 to 30 minutes of the greatest show on earth—a heart-warming, soul-stirring exhibit of the documents that made the United States free—and great.

Aboard the train could be seen, expressed in their own handwriting, the imperishable ideas of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and the other immortals. Words of wisdom, of courage, of freedom. Words to make an American thankful on Thanksgiving Day.

Called Symbol of Faith

Speaker of the House Joe Martin, of Massachusetts, in a brief ceremony marking the arrival of the Freedom Train here, spoke out what many were thinking.

"The Freedom Train, "Martin said, "as a symbol of our liberty and our richness of life, is not a boast of power.

"It is a symbol of our humble faith in God, our faith in ourselves, and our heart-deep desire to help the rest of the world to see, to learn, to share, and to love the marvelous fruits of freedom as have we in the United States."

The Speaker of the House warned the throng gathered in the West Concourse of the Sta-

Sam Baugh Hurt Slightly as Gift Car Hits Culvert

Sammy Baugh's new Packard station wagon, presented to him at last Sunday's football game at Griffith Stadium, came out second best in a brush with a culvert on Route 1 yesterday.

Sammy himself turned up with a "knot" on his head and a scratched knee but is in no danger of missing his Sunday date with the Boston Yanks at Boston.

Two doors and a fender of the station wagon were smashed when Sammy was forced to swerve to keep from being hit by an oncoming car.

GOP Leaders Plan to Press For One Tax-Reform Law

By Samuel W. Bell

Tax legislation to be pressed to passage in the January session of Congress, regardless of President Truman's attitude, it was learned yesterday, will be confined to one bill, according to present plans of the Republican leadership.

The previous party program, calling, first, for a "quickie" bill to cut 1948 individual income taxes by an estimated four billion dollars, to be followed by a second measure generally revising the Federal tax structure, has been abandoned.

Republican leaders in Congress, particularly those in the Senate, have been brought to the realization that the January session will be too short to pass two tax bills. As the result they have decided to concentrate on a tax cut to relieve the 1948 burden, coupled with elimination of some of the more obvious inequities in the Jerry-built wartime tax structure.

The Republican tax program, according to tentative agreements thus far reached by both House and Senate leaders, will not await President Truman's messages to the regular session in Congress. Instead, the tax cut will be discussed, and probably approved, at least in principle, at next week's meetings of the House Republican Steering Committee and conference.

With the approval of the Steering Committee and the party caucus, Representative Harold Knutson (R., Minn.), chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, will introduce a tax-cut bill in the present emergency session be-

U. N. Reports Hint Victory For Partition

Palestine's Future At Stake Today in General Assembly

New York, Nov. 27 (New York Herald-Tribune).—The United Nations General Assembly will renew its efforts to decide the future of Palestine tomorrow after Thanksgiving recess that saw both opponents and proponents of the plan to partition the Holy Land engaged in a titanic struggle for votes.

At the close of debate on Wednesday night, partition, which needs a two-thirds majority to win, had only 28 sure votes, while 15 countries had declared themselves against the plan.

The recess produced a series of authoritative reports, which, if confirmed in the final ballot, will give the pro-partitionists not only the two votes they needed on Wednesday but the support of two other countries, whose ballots would be essential to partition victory if the Arabs should, as is believed possible, pick up the vote of Liberia.

Possible Victory Seen

These reports, coming from sources in positions to know, had it that Luxembourg, France and Argentine, so far listed as abstentions, will definitely cast their ballots for partition, and that China, also counted as an abstainer, may join the supporters of the plan.

This would give the partitioners a score of 32, enough to win if reports that Paraguay, Colombia, El Salvador, Ethiopia, and Honduras—all doubtful states—abstain from voting, and if Mexico, Yugoslavia and Britain, all announced abstainers, continue that course.

In addition, it was reported from Port Au Prince, Haiti, that the Haitian delegation to the UN, which came out against partition on Wednesday, has been instructed to reverse its position and vote for the plan.

If confirmed, it would raise the vote for partition to a possible 33, and reduce the Arab support to a sure 14 and a possible 15.

The Arabs lost one supporter on Wednesday, when the Siamese

13 Killed In Alaskan Air Crash

Yakutat, Alaska, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Thirteen persons were killed today when a DC-3 commercial cargo airliner crashed and burned in a predawn landing attempt 2 miles from Yakutat Airfield.

The plane ploughed into a low hillside shortly after 4:20 a. m. (PST) as the pilot made his landing approach through a light fog and drizzling rain.

A Coast Guard party reported the twin-engine transport was "demolished" and all aboard were killed outright.

Most of the dead were residents of Oregon and Washington, returning to their homes on charter rates after the plane had unloaded a cargo at Fairbanks and Anchorage.

The plane belong to Columbia Air Cargo Co. of Portland, Oreg.

The company reported the airliner was piloted by Jay B. Haworth, jr., Portland, Oreg., a World War II Army pilot. Copilot was T. A. Keranen, 26, Vanport City, Oreg., also a veteran war pilot.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration reported the pilot had asked for and received permission to make a straight approach to the runway at Yakutat Airfield, in southeastern Alaska.

Four Known Survivors Saved From Army Ship

Ketchikan, Alaska, Nov. 27 (A.P.). A Coast Guard rescue party completed today the removal of the four known survivors of the wrecked Army transport Clarksdale Victory from Desolate little Hippa Island, as the probable death toll was placed at 49.

The last three survivors of Monday night's shipwreck were taken aboard the cutter Citrus. One of the trio, unidentified in the dispatch from the scene, has a broken hip. All were reported suffering from shock and exposure.

The other known survivor was taken yesterday to the cutter Wachusetts.

Only four bodies have been recovered. The survivors expressed the belief the other 45 missing men met death as the after half of the ship broke off and sank.

Loss of 49 lives would make it the worst ship disaster on the Alaska sea lanes since 1918, when the Canadian Pacific liner Princess Sophia ran aground and sank with 331 persons.

Wrecked Freighter's Crew Saved by U. S. Vessel

Some Agreements Reached

Russia Balks at Proposal For Study of German Border

By Wes Gallagher

London, Nov. 27 (A.P.).—The United States, Britain and Russia agreed tonight, informants said, on the necessity of quickly forming a central government for all of Germany. Russia balked at creating a commission to study Germany's final boundaries.

Over the protests of the United States and Britain, Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov declared that so far as the Soviet Union was concerned eastern Germany up to the Oder and Neisse Rivers was ceded to Poland and required no further study. The Potsdam Conference placed this territory under provisional Polish administration "pending final determination of Poland's western frontier."

The Big Four Foreign Ministers, in the third session of the current meeting here, covered a half dozen subjects. The conference sources said the United States, Russia and Britain reached a tentative agreement that a German government should participate in any peace conference and ratify any treaty.

Bidault Insists on Agenda

The foreign ministers discussed topic after topic in general terms, overriding protests of France's Georges Bidault that the agenda was not being followed.

Despite apparent wide areas of "agreement," it was said none of the Big Four turned up anything new enough in their positions over those outlined at Moscow last spring to indicate any break in deadlocks on main issues. The ministers are attempting to draft peace treaties for Germany and Austria.

Secretary of State George C. Marshall took a slight step toward approving a more "centralized" government than the United States formally had favored, saying of Britain's proposal on this point:

"It gives more of a central organization for Germany than the proposal of the United States delegation and still more than, I believe, proposed by the French. It is in general detail very much in accord with the United States proposal and I think we can easily accept it in part . . . "

"Premature," Says Molotov

The proposal for establishment of a big-power commission to map Germany's future frontiers was made by British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin. He was promptly supported, informants said, by Marshall and Bidault.

Molotov, however, described the idea as "premature" and declared that various suggestions for handling the problem should be given additional study, the informants said.

The Soviet Foreign Minister, who fought the western powers for two days to have German peace treaty procedure put ahead on the agenda, led off with a long discussion on the need for a central German government and put this first on his recommendations.

Bidault commented: "If we change our agenda as soon as we

Senate Renews Interim-Aid Debate Today

House Leaders Plan To Discuss Proposed 108-Million Cut Monday

The Senate today will resume debate on the Administration's 597 million dollars stopgap European relief program, destined for virtually certain passage next week—possibly Monday.

With many members out of town for the Thanksgiving weekend, today's debate was expected to be relatively routine, particularly in view of Wednesday's smashing vote of almost two-to-one against a move of eight Republican Senators to slash nearly 200 million dollars from the fund authorization.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was even more confident last night of passage after the 56-30 defeat of the move to cut 197 million dollars from the measure. The Senate is in agreement not to take a final vote on the bill as a whole until Monday, and to debate and act today only on pending amendments, none of which is of the scope of that killed Wednesday.

GOP House Caucus Set

Also on Monday the House leadership will discuss the proposal of its Foreign Affairs Committee to cut a total of 108 million dollars from the Administration proposal—although it simultaneously proposes to provide 60 million dollars in relief for China, which the Administration had planned to leave until after January. The House Republican Steering Committee will meet Monday to form recommendations to be presented to the Republican House caucus the following day.

Two Republican members of the Senate Appropriations Committee, which will pass on the actual funds expenditure bill—both of whom were among the twenty Republicans who voted for the fund authorization cut Wednesday—meanwhile, raised questions bearing on the aid program.

Senator Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska, pointed out that any foreign-aid program which puts too great a strain on the domestic wheat supply may cause actual shortages of bread in the United States. With next year's supply still unknown, he cited warnings Wednesday before the Appropriations Committee that it would be dangerous to drain domestic supplies to a point where less than 250 million bushels would be car-

'Not Because We Like It'

Pole Says 'Postwar Situation' Forced Soviet Trade on Nation

Havana, Cuba, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Polish trade delegate, Stanislaw Raczkowski, appealed for economic help from the New World today and explained that Poland was forced to trade almost exclusively with Russia because of postwar conditions and "not because we like it."

He told the United Nations Trade and Employment Conference that "I think our participation in this conference is the last but not the least proof of our genuine interest in the revival and development of international trade."

Poland, he said, is suffering "for political reasons" from an international credit blockade. Poland's trade—almost exclusively bi-lateral with Russia—exists as such "not because we like it . . . but because we found ourselves after the war in a compulsory situation," Raczkowski said.

He warned that a denial of economic aid would "force all such countries . . . to rely on bi-lateral agreements so as to safeguard the balance of payments."

Russia, although invited, did not send a representative.

New French Government Wins Vote of Confidence

Motion Is Placed Before Assembly As Public Service Unions Reject Strike

BULLETIN

Paris (Friday), Nov. 28 (A.P.).—Premier Robert Schuman's anti-strike coalition government was uphold in a vote of confidence by the French National Assembly early today. The vote was 324 to 187, with 83 abstentions.

Schuman, whose government now is fighting an increasing wave of Communist-led strikes, won the Assembly's confidence after promising to demonstrate "proofs of the government's energy" in the labor crisis before the day is out.

Paris, (Friday), Nov. 28 (A.P.).—A motion of confidence in Premier Robert Schuman's new cabinet, now fighting an increasing wave of Communist-led strikes, was placed before the French National Assembly early today during an all-night debate.

The motion putting the government to the legislative test was introduced jointly by five deputies representing each of the blocs supporting Schuman, a Popular Republican.

It was placed before the Assembly a few hours after leaders of France's one million unionized public service workers applied an unexpected checkrein to the strike wave by voting against a walkout.

Those presenting the motion were Robert Lecourt, Popular Republican; Henri Queuille, Radical Socialist; Eugene Claudius Petit, Democratic-Socialist Resistance; Jean Charlot, Socialist, and Marcel Roclore, Independent Republican.

Asks Immediate Vote

Schuman asked that the motion be voted upon immediately.

The non-strike action came soon after Schuman told the National Assembly his government was prepared to use force as "a last recourse" to end the crippling strikes, now involving two million workers throughout the nation.

The new premier, outlining his centrist government's position on the labor crisis, said "the right to strike must be regulated."

Strike Was Expected

The government had braced itself for a strike by the public service workers, who threatened to walk out if their pay increase demands were not met by tomorrow.

The public service union leaders voted six to four against the strike, with one official abstaining. Their vote was on acceptance or rejection of "the principle of the strike."

Heads of the finance, public works, air, war and marine, public health and tobacco, and the national education department unions voted against the strike. Favoring it were the general economy, general administration and communications unions and a representative of state workers already on strike. The police union abstained.

Schuman, interrupting a speech by Communist Deputy Waldeck Rochet, told the Assembly "We will not permit any attack on the right to work, and we will punish any act of sabotage." Force will be used, he said, if "persuasion and authority" fail.

The strike movement widened with the walkout of telephone workers in three of Paris' key exchanges, cutting off telephone

Setup Puzzle Slows Drafting Of Aid Bill

Truman Must Pick Herter, Harriman Or 1 of 2 Other Plans

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

President Truman is trying to choose among four different plans for administering the European recovery program before sending his recommendations to Congress.

There has been such lack of agreement in his official family that the whole complex question of administration and management has been tossed into the President's lap for his decision, it was learned yesterday.

This has turned out to be the most baffling of all the problems involved in the four-year "Marshall Plan."

The Herter committee of congressmen and the Harriman committee of private citizens have struggled with the problem and have come up with widely different proposals.

3 Other Issues Unsettled

The executive agencies of the Government have wrestled with it and have sent two different plans to the President: plans different from each other and from the Herter and Harriman versions.

In addition, three other Marshall Plan issues are still unsettled within the Administration, one of them already referred to the White House and the other two still being debated within the executive agencies.

The one on the President's desk is an inter-agency dispute involving shipping and steel. The Maritime Commission is up in arms over the Harrimen committee's proposal, indorsed within the Government, of letting Europe have surplus American ships instead of

Reds Urge Japan Treaty Talks Soon

London (Friday), Nov. 28 (A.P.).—The Russian news agency Tass said today the Soviet government had suggested that Foreign Ministers of China, the United States, Russia and Great Britain meet next January to discuss a peace settlement for Japan.

The Tass report, which was from Moscow and was distributed by the Soviet monitor here, said Russia suggested that the proposed special session be held in China provided that "the Chinese government deems this desirable."

Russia Protests Arrest Of 19 Citizens in France

Paris, Nov. 27 (A.P.).—The Russian government asked France tonight to "bring without delay to the Soviet Embassy in France" 19 Soviet citizens arrested by French authorities.

The 19, including several members of a group called "The Union of Soviet Citizens," were arrested after the Interior Minister charged members of the union with "interference in French affairs" during France's current labor troubles.

It was understood the Russians had been deported by the French to the Soviet zone of Germany.

A protest against their arrest and a request that the 19 be produced at the embassy here was contained in a note handed to the French Foreign Ministry by Alexandre Abramov, Soviet Embassy Counselor.

The protest was handed in a few hours after police at Cannes arrested Gen. Vladimir Postovsyk, 62, chairman of the union. His nationality was not announced.

The Russian note said that, despite a long delay since the arrest of the 19, French authorities had not informed the Soviet Embassy of the facts in the case or the reason for the arrests.

The Russians said they would "insist" on explanations.

Yanks Abroad Eat Turkey, Pledge Help

By The Associated Press.

Americans abroad gave thanks yesterday for the nation's bounty which thousands vowed they must share with a needy world.

Turkey was king for Americans from Tokyo to Trieste. Queen for a day—and a busy one—was the mother or wife who prepared a big Thanksgiving dinner at home with all the trimmings.

Groups of Americans throughout impoverished Europe celebrated the day with turkey—where it was obtainable. But they did not forget the hungry of Europe while they feasted.

Lewis W. Douglas, the United States Ambassador to Britain, declared in a brief speech in London that "we can be thankful" the American people "are recognizing the distress of people in distant lands across the waters and are prepared at great sacrifice to extend support, so needed for the restoration of the ordinary civilization of the world."

In Trieste, a trouble spot of Europe, turkey and all the trimmings were consumed by 50,000 United States troops.

Wherever the American flag flew over United States garrisons and Navy ships at sea turkey was served to service personnel.

In Tokyo Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme commander for the Allied powers, maintained business as usual, but he planned a turkey dinner with his wife and son at the embassy.

Typical of the American menu throughout the world was what the United States Embassy in London served from its canteen—roast turkey, dressing, cranberry sauce, mashed and sweet potatoes, asparagus, turnips, pumpkin pie, nuts, candy, fruit and coffee. To Englishmen most of the items either were rationed or unobtainable.

Americans in Germany staged benefit parties to help needy Germans and displaced persons. A community drive was under way in Berlin to collect food and clothing for the needy.

In Paris, Ambassador Jefferson Caffery read President Truman's proclamation at a service in the American church. Brig. Gen. Howard L. Peckham, commander of the United States Graves Registration Command, presided at a dinner for military personnel.

In Rome, President Truman's message was read by Ambassador James C. Dunn at an inter-denominational service in St. Paul's American church. A special mass was celebrated in the Church of Santa Susanna, the Paulist Fathers' American church.

Czechoslovakia's Communist minister of social welfare, Zdenek Nejedly, presided at a Prague ceremoney for the distribution of 1300 gift packages from the committee for American relief in Europe (CARE).

In Oslo, Norway, Ambassador Charles Ulric Bay held a reception for Americans and their friends.

In Vienna a football game was staged for 2000 fans who saw the fourteenth United States Constabulary team win over a team from Wiesbaden, Germany, 13 to 6.

Trumans Lead Thanks Giving

Washington cab driver who drove him to church.

The driver remarked how quiet the city was at that hour. "Almost like Sunday," said Dr. Pruden.

But the devil's been up a long time," said the driver.

Wants Christians to Run World

"The world ought not to be run by the devil, but by Christian people," said the driver.

"That's what I tell my people all the time," said Dr. Pruden.

"Are you a preacher?" asked the driver.

Dr. Pruden said he was, and added that he was on his way to preach to the President.

"I hope you'll mention what I just said," the driver said.

The anecdote won a big smile from the President. Dr. Pruden said he told the story with the thought "that the President believes with all of us that the future of the world is in the hands of those who put their trust in God."

Two pews had been reserved for the President and his party. Halfway through the service ushers allowed several persons who had been standing to fill the pew in front of the President.

Mrs. Truman picked her coat from the seat beside her to give the place to William Jennings Price of 2101 Connecticut ave. nw., Washington lawyer and former American Minister to Panama from 1913 to 1921.

Dr. Pruden's sermon was based on passage from the Psalms in which David said "I will bless the Lord at all times; His praise shall continually be in my mouth."

At the Pan-American mass, Msgr. Sheen insisted the only way to rid the world of communism was by changing the hearts of would-be Communists.

"The peoples of the Americas have forgotten that communism is not an economic doctrine, but a philosophy of life," said the priest.

A pocession from the rectory to the church opened the mass, at which the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, pontificated. The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, administrator of the Washington and Baltimore Archdioceses, presided. Also in the sanctuary were the Most Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan, auxiliary bishop of Washington and Baltimore and former rector of St. Patrick's Church; the Most Rev. Arsene Turquetil, O. M. I., of Catholic University, retired vicar-apostolic of the Hudson Bay area, and others.

At neighborhood and other services throughout Greater Washington, the emphasis was on "giving thanks by giving." Hungry and cold persons abroad and the needy at home will benefit from the contributions of food, clothing and cash donated at the services. The Thanksgiving Food Collection of War Relief Services, National Catholic Welfare Conference, was stressed in parishes throughout America.

Rabbis, cantors and members of 10 synagogues participated in a Jewish community "thanks" observance at Adas Israel Synagoguge, 6th and I sts. nw.

Addressing the service, Rabbi Morris Pickholz, of the Washington Highlands Jewish Center, urged that Americans especially give thanks for the future, "keeping faith in ourselves, our country and in our democracy." Cantor Jacob Barkin, of the host congregation, sang "America" and other selections. Rabbi Solomon H. Metz was host rabbi. Other participating spiritual leaders were Rabbis Henry Segal, Moshe H. Levinson, Simon Burnstein, Herman J. Waldman, Ira Sud, Zemach Green, Samuel Penner and Ephraim Greenberg.

Clergymen and congregations of five downtown religious groups participated in a united service at National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle. They were Dr. J. Warren Hastings, pastor of the host church; the Rev. Carl Heath Kopf of First Congregational Church; Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, Calvary Baptist Church; Dr. John W. Rustin, Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld of the Washington Hebrew (Reformed) Congregation. Mr. Kopf preached the sermon.

Lire's Value Is Cut To Curb Dealings

Value in Dollars Is Down 68%; New Rate to Fluctuate

Rome, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—The government in a dramatic move to wipe out the black market in currency and stimulate exports set a new exchange rate of 589.47 lire to $1 today, a reduction of the lire's value by 68.4 per cent as compared to the old rate of 350 to $1.

It was the fourth lowering of the lire's value since the end of the war.

In its move, which astonished economic experts, the government set a lower rate of value of the lire than that which obtains on the fluctuating free market.

Under the decision, the legal rate for the lire will be set anew on the first day of each month on the basis of the average supply and demand price for dollars for the previous month on the Rome and Milan exchanges.

The rate for December of currencies other than the dollar are: British pound sterling, 1961.3, and Swiss franc, 149.32.

The government's decision ended the previous system under which there were three rates—the official rate of 350, the "tourist exchange" rate, and the "Export valuation" rate.

The tourist rate had been roughly an average between the official rate and the fluctuating export rate.

In setting the new rate, the government took the export dollar quotation on the Rome and Milan exchanges as its basis. The result was that as of today, the prices of the dollar is higher by nine points officially than it is on the black market.

Continuing Leftist-led disorder flared today in the "red slums" Rome suburban areas of Prenestino San Giovanni and Pigneto.

Several scores of men attacked dozens of newspaper stands at dawn and burned copies of all but extreme Leftist newspapers. The Communist paper Unita and the left-wing Socialist Avanti were spared.

Police attributed the incident to vengeance for a bomb explosion Tuesday night in the Unita and Avanti printing plant.

U. S. Seamen Back French Ship Strike

Bordeaux, France, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—American crew members of the Liberty ship Halton Carey, strike-bound in the local harbor, today announced their support of the Communist-led maritime strike and the Communist fight against the "imperialist" Marshall Plan.

In a resolution made public by the Bordeaux central strike committee, the American sailors, members of the National Maritime Union (CIO), said:

"We American workers are with the French people in fighting against Taft-Hartley methods on a national and international plane and against the constant rise of prices.

"We equally support you in your courageous fight against the imperialist Marshall Plan, for we believe each nation has a right to its own conception."

communications in headquarters of the capital's two police forces and the national security police.

While Frenchmen shivered in subfreezing temperatures heralding the arrival of winter, Parisians had to cook on stoves that had virtually no gas pressure because of a strike of gas workers. Others stood long hours waiting for buses, because of the railroad strike. Frenchmen were faced with the possibility of no newspapers because of strikes in paper mills. Coal was running short because of the miners' strike.

Robert Lacoste, minister of production, said tonight the coal strike alone was costing France 150,000 tons of coal daily, and said if it continued Paris electric plants would be forced to close down Tuesday.

The Socialist minister, appealing by radio to the miners to return to work, said other strikes this year, up to last week when the current wave began, already had cost France 600,000 tons of coal.

Test Vote Likely

Schuman, a member of the moderate Popular Republican Movement (MRP), failed in his first effort to settle the strike crisis, and now his 4-day-old coalition faced its first test vote in the Assembly.

Following Schuman's final offer of an immediate temporary indemnity to meet the high cost of living and its rejection by 18 national unions involved in the strike movement, a stiffening was noticeable in the attitudes of both the government and the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor (CGT).

The Communist Party's political bureau expressed its "complete agreement with the just demands of French workers." It directed Communist deputies in the Assembly to attack Schuman's settlement offer as "an insult to the misery of the workers." It appealed to all workers to manifest solidarity with the strikers.

Government sources had said Schuman would not ask, himself, for a vote of confidence from the Assembly, but that it was likely one of the parties represented in the government would present a motion which would permit the cabinet to test its support among the deputies.

U. S. Bank Willing To Give Belgium $50,000,000 Credit

Chairman William McC. Martin, jr., announced last night that the Export-Import Bank was prepared to extend a 50-million-dollar credit to Belgium for the purchase of American raw materials and equipments.

The loan was requested on November 21 by Gov. Maurice Frere of the National Bank of Belgium, as a medium of bolstering Belgian foreign trade.

Martin said the Export-Import Bank was prepared to make the grant on these conditions:

1. Provision for repayment, as proposed by Frere, in five years in 10 semi-annual installments of five million dollars.
2. The credit to be available up to December 31, 1948.
3. Schedule war materials and equipment to be financed under the grant.
4. A rate of interest based on the bank's policy of not competing with private capital.

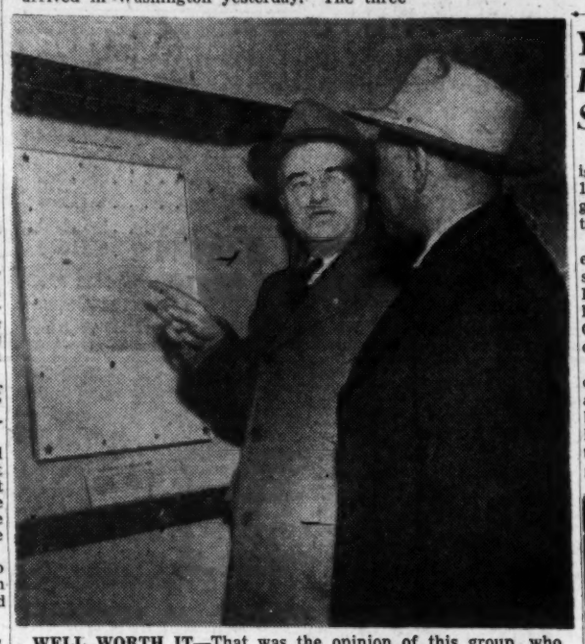
Waiting for Freedom Train to Arrive

The Washington Post

EARLY RISERS—Throngs were waiting outside Union Station when the Freedom Train arrived in Washington yesterday. The three men in the front row at the right of the group pictured here had been on hand since 4:30 a. m.



WELL WORTH IT—That was the opinion of this group, who also were on hand long before daylight. Pictured with exhibits here are Charles A. Marlow (left), 1705 Lamont st. nw., who arrived at 4 a. m., and Winston H. Luck, 937 Westminster st. nw., who began waiting at 4:30

Chinese Forces Again Take Red Stronghold

Nanking, Nov. 27 (AP).—Chinese government forces were credited by pro-government dispatches today with recapture of Yenling, a major Communist base in central China.

There were no details of the action 45 miles south of Kaifing in eastern Honan Province, but the press hailed it as a serious blow to Communist hopes of effecting junctions of the wide-ranging Communist armies of General Chen Yi, Chen Keng and Liu Po-cheng in the Honan-Anhwei border region.

tion, and queued outside in a long line, that Americans "of this later day" have come to take our liberties too much for granted. He urged a rededication to "eternal vigilance" as the price of liberty.

Efforts Abroad Cited

America is now spending billions, he pointed out, to help other people achieve freedom and live in freedom. Declared Representative Martin:

"We must stand as a united people to stop the march of despotism across the world. Any aggressive doctrine which would enslave the world must be destroyed, or else free men must fight against it until they die. Death is to be preferred to human enslavement.

"Any aggressive power which today seeks to march to power across the wreckage and misery of the world can do so only by trampling under foot all the sacred concepts of life; by trampling under foot human hearts, human happiness, and human freedom.

"Any such ruthless power must be stopped before it makes a charnel house of the whole world."

The line began forming outside Track 4—where the Freedom Train is making a two-day stand in its year-long trip around the country—around 7 a. m. But the first comer, Charles A. Marlow, 40, of 1705 Lamont st. nw., a copyright examiner, arrived at 4 a. m. Dressed in three sweaters and a coat, Marlow passed the time reading "The Federal Union," the textbook he uses for night classes at George Washington University, which he is attending under the GI Bill of Rights.

Marlow was with the Tenth Army at Okinawa, and witnessed the Japanese surrender of the Ryukyu Island chain to Gen. "Vinegar Joe" Stilwell. Aboard the Freedom Train Marlow once again saw the original document, hanging along side other notable documents marking the end of the second World War.

Second to take his place in line—30 minutes behind Marlow—was 51-year-old Winston H. Luck, of 937 Westminster st. nw., a linotype repairman at the Government Printing Office.

"I want to see everything aboard the train pertaining to freedom," Luck declared when asked what he wanted most to see.

He did, too, all 127 documents, beginning with the Magna Carta and an announcement of Columbus' discovery, the first panel of the first exhibition car through papers of the Colonial days, Civil War, both World Wars, to the United Nations Charter in the third exhibition it car.

Local appearance of the Freedom Train was arranged by a special committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

The Freedom Train will be open again today—for the second and last time here—from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Youth Who Learned Hard Way Gives Safety Lectures

A series of lectures on safety is being given by Robert Jones, 19-year-old former Richard Montgomery High student, who learned the hard way.

Victim of a chemistry classroom explosion last January which resulted in the loss of both his hands, Robert is currently giving safety lectures before Montgomery County elementary school students.

He is enrolled at the University of Maryland and hopes to become a lawyer. Since the accident he has been fitted with both artificial hands and a pair of hooks, driving to and from College Park in a car given him by county residents.

Setup Puzzle Slows Drafting Of Long-Range Aid Measure

using scarce American steel for its own shipbuilding.

Up to President Alone

As usual in such disputes within the Administration family, the President probably will have to decide it himself.

The two unsettled issues still being argued outside the White House are:

1. Whether the United States should provide a two or three billion-dollar stabilization fund for the 16 "Marshall Plan" countries, or whether the International Monetary Fund should be asked to provide it, perhaps with a change in the fund's statutes. This is now being debated in the Treasury and the National Advisory Council, the supreme inter-departmental agency on American foreign lending.

Spending Ceiling Puzzle

2. Whether Congress should be asked to authorize an upper limit of expenditure for the whole four-year program, or simply for the first 15 months. Secretary Marshall has already estimated 20 billion dollars as the upper limit for four years, of which 7½ billion would be needed in the 15 months ending June 30, 1949. Admittedly any four-year estimate is hazardous; it has been such a staggering job to arrive at any figure, allowing for varying assumptions of prices over the next four years, that one night last weekend weary officials had to borrow calculating machines from the Bureau of Labor Statistics to make 12,000 separate computations.

Because of all these major uncertainties, and many minor ones, the draft bill is not yet ready for Congress and the President's message is still being drafted. And it has not yet been decided whether the President's message will be accompanied by the vast array of detailed proposals, facts and figures which officials have been preparing for many weeks.

May Not Meet Deadline

If the message goes to the Hill by itself, the supporting data will, of course, go to the foreign policy committees of the Senate and House which are expected to start their hearings soon after the message has been read. In any case, it is unlikely that the President will meet the deadline of about December 1 which he set for himself a week ago.

Among officials working on the Marshall Plan it has become a favorite guessing game to predict what kind of administrative structure the President will recommend to Congress, and what kind Congress will eventually accept. The issue involves sound management, finance, international relations and domestic politics, all in ample measure.

4 Plans Outlined

Briefly, the four plans before the President are as follows:

The Herter committee of the House proposed a corporation to manage the European recovery program, run by an eight-man board of directors appointed by the President. The eight-man board would make contracts with foreign countries needing aid, would "screen" foreign nations' requirements, would supply them with food, fuel and fertilizer, and would take policy guidance from a new Foreign Aid Council including Cabinet officers.

The Harriman committee of private citizens proposed a new agency, perhaps a corporation, headed by a presidentially appointed administrator. He would take policy guidance from a board of directors including Cabinet officers, and would have an advisory committee of private citizens.

Of the plans submitted by the executive departments, the first would set up a brand-new Government agency with an administrator reporting directly to the President and advised by a public committee. Its representatives abroad would report through the Secretary of State to the administrator.

The second of the executive department's plans would set up an "autonomous" new agency within the State Department, directly subject to the authority of the Secretary. Its head would rank as an Undersecretary of State; it would use existing government machinery wherever possible, and its representatives abroad would be added to the staffs of the various embassies.

18 Other Points of Difference

As if these differences were not enough, each of the four plans differ in 18 or 20 ways in the proposed powers of supply, allocation, procurement, financing and argument appears to be between those who want a new machine, with all powers centralized within it, and those who want to use existing machinery of the Government wherever possible.

In President Roosevelt's day it was usual to meet a brand-new problem by setting up a brand-new agency, often superimposed upon old ones. So far President Truman has taken the opposite course of having the old-line departments, sometimes against their will, absorb the remnants of the wartime agencies.

As for the corporation form, it has been frowned upon both in the Administration and in Congress except in strictly business fields—and there are few who argue seriously that the European recovery program is strictly a business proposition.

The betting, therefore, is that President Truman will favor a small and modest European recovery agency, with its jurisdiction strictly defined so that it will not clash with that of other Government departments. It has been estimated that the new agency will need not more than 300 employes in Washington and 200 in Europe.

It may seem a small matter compared to all the soul-searching it has caused in the Administration and in Congress, but it raises issues that go to the very heart of the "Marshall Plan." All those who disagree on the method are agreed on one thing: that management can make or break the recovery program on which so much else depends.

Washington Man Found Hanging In His Room

The body of William A. Butler, 56, was found hanging by a sash cord from an overhead steam pipe in his first floor room at 1312 Sixth st. nw. at about 11:40 a. m. yesterday. He was pronounced dead by Dr. Stephen A. Pridgen of the Emergency Hospital staff at 12.23 p. m.

Police believed Butler had stepped off the arm of a couch. They said he had been depressed since he had given up a coal and ice business three weeks ago on doctor's orders.

Mrs. Maud Morton, 29, wife of his stepson, said she served him breakfast at 10 a. m. She found his door bolted later, she told police, and discovered the body after shaking the bolt loose.

the United States delegation to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment, differed sharply with other delegations seeking either to:

1. Amend the charter to a degree he said would kill its usefulness.

2. Delay its adoption until world political and economic patterns are more refined.

He told a Thanksgiving Day plenary session that the United States, while objecting to some of the charter's escape clauses, regarded it as the best obtainable under present world conditions, and added:

"The charter must not be overloaded with a multiplicity of exceptions and escape clauses."

Clayton, replying to Latin American speakers in previous plenary sessions who urged further concessions to industrially underdeveloped nations, said the United States felt the escape clause already written into the charter draft allowing them to impose export and import quotas to protect infant industries was "unwise," but added:

"We are prepared to accept it, if general agreement may thereby be obtained."

delegate, Prince Subhas Svasti Svastivat withdrew from the Assembly because of dissension between him and his new government at home.

The factor said to have caused a last-minute switch by France, Luxembourg and Argentina and to have brought about reconsideration of its position by China was the argument advanced by U. N. officials and many pro-partition delegations—that partition is preferable to doing nothing at all particularly in the face of the British announcement that it will withdraw its troops from the Holy Land next year.

The U. N. officials hold that to do nothing would have serious effects on the world organization's prestige and create a feeling of distrust of its ability to make definite decisions on the issues placed before it.

Under the partition plan the British would be out of the Holy Land by Next August 1 and the two proposed nations would get their independence by the following October 1. A five-nation U. N. commission, backed by the Security Council, would handle the interim administration.

Line says his 150-mile tour gave him all the variety of a trip around the world. He filmed Italian vineyards, an Arabian horse ranch, date groves like those along the Nile, sand dunes reflecting the Sahara, Spanish fiesta dances, karakul sheep, Mexican missions, and even a camel race.

GOP to Press for One Tax-Reform Bill

fore December 15. According to an understanding with the Republican majority on the Ways and Means Committee, the bill would provide for:

An increase of $100 in the present standard $500 personal exemption for each taxpayer and dependent. This would result in a loss of from $1,900,000,000 to two billion dollars in annual revenue and remove an estimated six million persons from the present tax rolls.

A provision permitting all married couples to divide their combined incomes for purpose of computing Federal income taxes, as is now done in the so-called community property States together with repeal of the 1942 amendments to Federal estate and gift taxes viewed by the community property States as discriminating against their citizens. This revision would cost the treasury an estimated 800 million dollars in revenue, of which 600 million dollars would be in income taxes and 200 million dollars in estate and gift taxes.

Some reduction in the individual income taxes, either by percentages or a scaling down of rates, but not to the extent of the 30, 20 and 10.5 per cent cuts provided for in the tax legislation President Truman vetoed earlier this year. An estimated $1,200,000,000 to $1,300,000,000 would be available to take care of this cut under an over-all total reduction of approximately 4 billion dollars.

Although Representative Knutson has been reluctant to acknowledge that he will have to give up his original idea of two bills, it was made plain yesterday by Republican tax spokesmen in the Senate that nothing more than a single tax bill could be justified in the 1948 session. As the result Knutson has been prevailed upon to conform to that pattern and also to accept an increase in personal exemptions with its immediate and substantial benefit to the low-income group.

The split-income privilege, it was pointed out, amounts to a percentage reduction in the income brackets ranging from $6000 to $125,000. For that reason any percentage or rate cut that might be made in the 1948 bill would be smaller for the middle-income groups. Details of an adjustment along that line are now being worked out by the congressional tax experts for inclusion in the Knutson Bill.

Man-Made Rain Saves Dominican Crop

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Dominican information center said today man-made rain had ended a nine weeks drought in the rich La Vega agricultural area and saved an estimated 15-million-dollar to 18-million-dollar food crop, some of which was destined for Europe.

The center said squadrons of the Dominican air force yesterday bombarded moisture bearing clouds over the area with dry ice chemically treated with a formula created by scientists of the University of San Domingo and the Dominican agriculture department. Heavy rain lasting for hours followed the assault upon the clouds begin, it is not worth-while spending two days determining what our agenda should be."

Five-Point Proposal

Marshall, Bevin and Molotov stressed the need to form a central German government as soon as possible. Bevin, however, warned such a government should be created in a way that it would neither become a "puppet" nor lead to a "dictatorship."

At Moscow last April the Big Four also agreed on the necessity of a German government but disagreed on how it should be formed. Russia held out for a highly centralized semipolice state machinery, while the western powers wanted a federal structure with guarantees for individual freedoms.

Bevin again today stressed the need to guarantee these freedoms.

Mototov, conference sources said, made a five-point proposal in his discussion of Germany and received these replies from Marshall:

1. Prompt formation of a central German government. Marshall said: "I think we are in accord with that quite definitely."

2. This German government would be heard at the peace conference. Marshall said: "It involves the question of procedure or timing, in the main, which I think it will not be too difficult to resolve . . ."

3. That the peace treaty be signed by a German government. Marshall: "I think we are in accord with that."

4. A decision by the Foreign Ministers Council on the nations to participate in the peace conference. Marshall: "Requires more analysis and discussion."

(In general, Russia wants to hold treaty-making to 19 selected nations, including Albania, while the United States opposes Albania and wants to include all those who declared war on Germany, South American countries in particular.)

5. The peace treaty to be based on the three-power decisions of Yalta and Potsdam. Marshall made no direct comment on this proposal.

Potsdam Protocol Quoted

On the question of Germany's borders the big powers appeared as deadlocked as ever, informants said.

Molotov again insisted that the Potsdam and Yalta Conferences ceded eastern Germany formally and finally to Poland. Bevin and Marshall insisted equally firmly that no final decision had been made on this subject and that the German-Polish boundary was subject to more study.

Bidault said the provisional German-Polish line spoken of at Potsdam must be accepted, whether the four power Foreign Ministers approved it or not. This boundary was an accomplished fact, he said, pointing out that most of the Germans already had been removed from the area not administered by Poland, the conference sources said.

Marshall quoted the Potsdam protocol reading: "The final delimitation of the western frontier of Poland should await the final peace settlement."

France's Saar Claim Backed

Declaring Poland has a right to compensations for damages suffered at the hands of the Germans, Marshall said that the Foreign Ministers, however, must avoid any decision which takes all hope away from the moderate elements of the German people.

Marshall declared the industrial resources of any area ceded to Poland must be available to the rest of Germany and to all Europe. This statement was interpreted as a hint that the United States wants the productive capacity of Silesia, which Poland now occupies, placed at the service of all Europe along with the resources of the Ruhr.

Bevin and Marshall supported France's claim to the Saar, but Molotov, who refused to agree to this at Moscow, declared all of Germany's western borders should await a final settlement.

The proposed border-mapping commission would study the claims of the Netherlands, Belgium, France and Czechoslovakia.

Election Seems Certain

Some Cannery Workers Lose Overtime Pay

The wage-hour administrator yesterday exempted employers from paying some cannery workers overtime for working longer than 40 hours a week during 14 weeks of the year.

Administrator William R. McComb said the exemption would apply mainly to workers engaged in handling, labeling and casing of canned fresh fruits and vegetables.

member of the committee, told a reporter he believes its continuation "would be a very healthy thing for this country." He added:

"The Meyers case alone merits it. My opinion is that if the committee is allowed to expire, the work it has done never would be carried on by any of the Senate's regular committees."

Extended Last January

The committee was granted a year's extension last January, only after a bitter argument in the Senate. Opponents contended that its work should be taken over by the standing committees.

Senator Hatch (D., N. Mex.), a member of the group, opposed extension then and he said today he has not changed his mind. But Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) said he is "not particularly averse" to voting for an extension.

"It would be all right with me so long as the committee stays out of politics and operates strictly on the merits of matters before it," Pepper told a reporter.

Pepper has contended that in some o fits investigations the GOP-dominated committee was out to smear the Roosevelt Administration.

Senator Wherry (Nebr.), the Republican Whip, said he would support an extension bid "on a showing of justification."

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), chairman of the subcommittee which handled the Meyers inquiry, has stated that the group is going ahead between now and February 1 with a further check on wartime purchasing by the military services.

Council Urges Tariff Pact Revocation

The American Products Council yesterday accused the State Department of "crystal gazing" in its recently announced mass trade agreement with 22 nations and urged Congress to kill the Reciprocal Trade Agreement Act and "recapture its authority over the United States tariff structure."

The council, stating that it speaks for more than 100 manufacturers of products affected by the announced tariff cuts, said many of the deductions were "rash guesses" because they will be in effect through 1951 and "nobody can know" what foreign trade factors will be at that time.

"The State Department itself has admitted these reduced tariff rates have been designed for trade in a somewhat distant future," it said, "and advisory groups have suggested that the full effect of the tariff cuts will not be known until 1951 or later.

1948 Limit Urged

"The State Department in the interim should not be given authority to make further guesses. The Trade Agreements Act should expire in 1948 and Congress should recapture its authority over the United States tariff structure."

The council proposed that instead of the Trade Agreements Act, which gives the Administration power to negotiate mutual tariff-cutting deals with foreign nations, Congress should institute a flexible tariff system with provisions for increases and decreases of its rates "where desirable."

Suggests Nonpartisan Board

Such a program, it said, should be administered by a nonpartisan board under congressional limitations as to the extent of changes that can be made at any one time and the frequency of changes.

"And, what is perhaps of primary importance, the new system should contemplate an end to the rigidity of our tariff rates, which is inevitable if they are made subject to international treaties."

Czechs Hit Communist Grip on Films

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Nov 27 (U.P.).—A parliamentary committee approved a $6,320,000 appropriation for the ministry of information today after a turbulent 30-hour session during which deputies of all five non-Communist parties blasted the nationalized film industry as completely under Red control.

Communist Information Minister Vaclav Kopecky stormed and shouted as deputy after deputy denounced alleged Red control of the movies.

He was asked also why the movie industry did not show a profit, why the ministry allocated paper for "trashy" novels while refusing it for serious works, and why foreigners were not better informed about Czechoslovakia.

Kopecky's job carries with it control of the film industry, allocation of newsprint and control of the official news agency Cek.

One deputy said there was only one non-Communist among the top movie administrators. Another said non-Communists had only a "measly percentage" of all important movie posts. A third asked, without getting a reply, whether Communists were using the movies to influence public opinion.

A Ministry of Information spokesman admitted later that the movie industry was "strongly under Communist influence." He estimated that about 60 per cent of employes were Communists, including most of the key men.

The Gallup Poll

Voters List Germany, Greece Worst Off European Nations

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 27.—While Congress debates the issue of aid to stricken European countries the American public regards Germany, Greece, Poland, Italy and England as the five worst-off countries in Europe today.

France is listed next in the parade of unfortunate nations.

The current proposal before Congress calls for 597 million dollars of stopgap aid to Italy, France and Austria to tide them over the winter. So far as the American public is concerned Austria seems to be a sort of forgotten nation—less than 1 per cent of voters mention her as one of the worst-off countries.

Comparatively few Americans, of course, have any first-hand knowledge of conditions in the various parts of Europe. Their estimates of the amount of distress in each country are based almost entirely on impressions gained from reading newspaper reports or from radio broadcasts describing conditions. Greece and Germany have been given much more publicity than little Austria and some of the other nations.

From coast to coast the Institute put this question to a cross-section of the American voting population:

"Which European country do you regard as worst off today?"

The vote follows:

Germany	25%
Greece	12
Poland	8
Italy	8
England	8
France	7
Russia	4
Czechoslovakia	1
Norway	1
Bulgaria	1
Holland	1
Others	1
All Europe	8
No opinion	17

(Totals more than 100 per cent because some voters named more than one country.)

There are some interesting contrasts between the foregoing list and the results of a similar poll conducted recently in France by the French Institute of Public Opinion.

French voters were asked what countries in the world they consider worst off.

The French put Greece first on the list as the country suffering the most. Then the French public listed France as the second worst-off nation in Europe.

The results of the French poll follow:

POLL IN FRANCE

Germany	8
Italy	8

Iran Discounts Rumors Of Invasion by Russians

Tehran, Iran, Nov. 27 (AP).—The newspaper Attash declared today a three-way attack was planned from Soviet Russia on three provinces of northern Iran December 13, but an Iranian army spokesman said there was no truth in the report.

Another official source commented that the Attash account was a copy of a confidential report sent to the Iranian government by Gen. Shah Bakhti, Iranian army's chief inspector in Azerbaijan province. An American spokesman in Tehran appeared unperturbed by the story and had no comment on it. The newspaper said attacks would be aimed at Azerbaijan, Mazandaran and Khorasan.

Russians Reported Winning Hold Over Unions, Students

By The Associated Press

Communists seeking a foothold in western Europe are making their greatest inroads in the trade unions of France and Italy and in the minds of the school children of Germany, Representative Kersten (R., Wis.) said yesterday.

When the long-range Marshall program comes up in Congress next January, he said, he will formally propose that a "substantial part" of American aid be used to support democratic trade unions in their battle against communism.

"We should give them real help, in money and supplies, because that's where the Communists are trying to establish their strongholds," Kersten, recently returned from Europe said. "In Italy, they have already won 51 per cent control of the Italian Trade Union Council.

"As for the schools, the Russians are pumping the children full of Communist propaganda in their zone in Germany. They are starting them down the totalitarian path exploited so successfully by Hitler, and they're going to have the same setup in 5 or 10 years as Hitler had."

Kersten cited figures to show that Russia has poured 27 million Communist-slanted textbooks into German schools in the Soviet zone, while the United States has provided only four million "democratized" textbooks in the American zone—one book per child. He said American forces destroyed all German textbooks at the end of the war.

"Before the war there were 50,000 teachers in the United States zone," he said. "We discharged 35,000 and have since increased the figure. They still lack 20,000 teachers. There is one to every 70 children. There were 3500 university professors. Now their are 1000.

"For their part, the Russians even furnish extra food rations for children who take special Communist indoctrination."

Kersten called for an early end to the denazification program, declaring:

"Hundreds of thousands of competent people in Germany are under a cloud of uncertainty as to their fate. Until they know their status, they haven't the will to rebuild."

India, Pakistan Agree on Government

New Delhi, India, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—The prime ministers of India and Pakistan were reported to have agreed on a coalition government for the battle-torn princely state of Kashmir during a long meeting today.

Reliable sources said the coalition would be headed by Sheikh Abdullah, a Moslem friendly to India and present head of Kashmir's emergency council. It would rule until Kashmir decides by plebiscite whether to join India or Pakistan.

Stunt Flier Edmondson Sets Another Havana-D. C. Record

HIS ONLY "PASSENGER"—Woodrow W. (Woody) Edmondson, Lynchburg, Va., flier, exhibits the doll he carried on his record-breaking flight from Havana, Cuba, to Washington National Airport, yesterday. His time was three hours, 15 minutes, 13 seconds

Woodrow W. Edmondson, the stunt flier from Lynchburg, Va., broke his second air speed record in three days yesterday by racing his stripped-down P-51 from Havana to Washington in three and a quarter hours.

Edmondson streaked across National Airport at 1:44:13 p. m. to clip one hour, 35 minutes and 46 seconds from the 10-year-old record set by Alexander P. de Seversky. His exact time was 3 hours, 15 minutes and 13 seconds.

Tuesday, in the same red and white P-51, Edmondson broke de Severesky's record, also made in 1937, for the run from Washington to Havana. He did that in 3 hours and 38 minutes, taking an hour and 20 minutes less than de Seversky.

In both flights Edmondson made a brief refuelling stop at Jacksonville, Fla.

Smiling broadly after his landing yesterday, the 33-year-old stunt pilot displayed a large doll he carried on both trips.

Edmondson appeared in an air show at Hybla Airport below Alexandria, Va., last July. Later last summer he was injured when his plane crashed during a speed trial at the Cleveland air races.

Pravda Says U. S. and Britain Forming German Army Unit

Moscow, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Communist newspaper Pravda accused the United States and Britain today of "preserving or forming" anew units of the German army and declared France was recruiting former Nazis to suppress the Viet-Nam uprising in Indochina.

The newspaper's Berlin correspondent said "at present there are over 50,000 German soldiers and officers in the French Foreign Legion." The correspondent declared he had seen a photograph taken in 1947 showing Germans in Indochina.

(In Paris a French war office spokesman said German soldiers are being recruited in the French occupation zone for the Foreign Legion but explained that after basic training at Marseille these troops are sent to Sidi Bel Abes in Morocco. He said "Only Frenchmen are recruited in the colonial service." Deriding the Pravda report that 50,000 Germans had been enlisted, the spokesman said there "are only about 15,000 men in the whole Foreign Legion.")

[Robert Sherrod of Time Magazine, wrote recently from Indochina that many members of the French Foreign Legion there were Germans, and that several that he had talked to were unable to answer in French—Editor's note.]

Pravda's correspondent said only 25 of 160 underground military plants had been destroyed in the United States zone of Germany and declared 98 per cent of the military installations employed by Adolf Hitler's army in the Soviet zone had been destroyed.

68-Year-Old Head Of School Weds Ex-Student of 20

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 27 (AP).—Sixty-eight-year-old Charles S. Catherman was honeymooning today with a 20-year-old former student in the business school which he has operated here for about 30 years.

Catherman and the former Marie Burkholder of Garrett, Pa., were married yesterday in the parsonage of St. Paul's Church. The Rev. Harry T. Bowersox, pastor, performed the ceremony.

The bride studied at Catherman's school until October and used her training to obtain a stenographic position with the Allegany County Welfare Board. She previously attended Western Maryland College and was graduated from Meyersdale High School in Pennsylvania.

Catherman, a widower for the past year, is a past president of the Cumberland Rotary Club.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Senate to Take Up Aid Today

ried over from one crop year to the next.

No Need to Rush, Says Ball

Senator Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota charged the Truman Administration with trying to rush its program through Congress with "a combination of the blitzkrieg and the old mousetrap plan," asserting that the "rush act" is "a phony." No one will suffer, Senator Ball declared, if Congress takes two or three weeks for a careful examination of the program.

Administration quarters were reported to be concerned over the fate of the program as the result of the House committee cut and the action of 20 Republicans and 10 Democrats in the Senate favoring an even more severe cut Wednesday. Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, a Republican presidential candidate and one of the most powerful leaders of his party in the Senate, supported the move.

But while it appeared likely that Senator Ball would get his more lengthy discussion in Congress, the prospects were that the special session would not adjourn before passage of a stopgap aid program, possibly in a somewhat reduced form, depending on House action next week. One of the Senators favoring a slash conceded this privately last night.

Senate May Act on Cut Today

An attempt may be made in the Senate today, or before a final vote is taken next week, to cut the authorization, not by the 197 million dollar slash defeated Wednesday, but by the 108 million dollars reduction the House Foreign Affairs Committee has approved. This is not certain, however, and meantime a variety of amendments sponsored by Senators Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.); Glen H. Taylor (R., Idaho); James P. Kem, R., Mo.); Warren G. Magnuson, D., Wash.) and Homer Ferguson, R., Mich.), are pending.

Senator Carl A. Hatch (D., N. M.), although he voted against the fund-cutting amendment Wednesday and predicted the bill would pass with its full $597,000,000 authorization, said nevertheless that he expected the Appropriations Committee would reduce the amount available to about $450,000,000, a cut of $147,000,000.

Committee Approval Indicated

On the basis of Wednesday's vote in the Senate, however, the Senate appropriations committee was divided 12 to 6 against slashing the $597,000,000 total, although this division admittedly is not conclusive in advance of final Senate floor action and the possible House cut. Five Republicans and seven Democrats who are members of the appropriations committee voted against the move to cut the authorization, while four Republicans and two Democrats were among the 30 Senators supporting the cut move.

The Democrats favoring the cut were Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, former chairman of the committee, and Richard B. Russell of Georgia. The Republicans favoring, aside from Senators Ball and Wherry, were Senators C. Wayland Brooks of Illinois and Henry C. Dworshak of Idaho.

Senator Wherry, who is the Republican whip of the Senate, said he believed a quorum of the Senate would attend today, despite holiday absentees from the Capital. If the point is raised, and a quorum is not present, action on pending amendments would be delayed until Monday, when Senator Vandenberg is still hopeful of obtaining a final vote on the bill proper.

It seemed certain that the final version of the measure would be written in conference between House and Senate, when it will be necessary to adjust the varying totals carried in the Senate and proposed House bills and also take into account the House proposal for 60 million dollars in aid to China. There also is the complication of actually providing the funds for the program—which must be voted on by the appropriation committees of the two Houses—after the now pending authorization bill is enacted in its final form.

Representative Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.), a ranking member of the House Appropriations Committee, said last night there is "nothing mandatory" in his committee's proposal that the China aid amount be made available immediately. This was somewhat at variance with earlier reports of the House committee action—which still may be reconsidered before the bill formally is reported to the House proper—but Mundt said the group merely had expressed approval of State Department estimates that up to 20 million dollars a month might be needed for China during the first three months of 1948.

"If the State Department can show the Appropriations Committee that more funds are needed for Europe, less for China, there is nothing in the bill to prevent the transfer," Representative Mundt said.

Robert A. Lovett, acting secretary of State, indicated Wednesday that iad for China—not carried in the pending administration request to Congress—will be asked of the regular session in January.

Dangerous Winter Wheat Slump Forecast in Report

Minneapolis, Nov. 27 (U.P.)—A winter-wheat production slump serious enough to threaten the margin of safety in the Nation's grain supply was predicted today for 1948 by the Cargill Crop Bulletin.

The bulletin, a private letter published by the Cargill Grain Co., forecast a drop of 300 million bushels from the record 1947 production of 1,096,000,000 bushels.

Heavy export demands coupled with lower production may reduce the carry-over fro mthis year into next "to a dangerous point," the bulletin said.

2 Cattlemen Accuse U. S. Of Bad Faith

Austin, Tex., Nov. 27 (AP).—Two Texas cattlemen joined today in saying thay and the public had been "deliberately misled" by Federal officials in events leading up to abandonment of the slaughtering program to control foot and mouth disease in Mexico.

They were Robert J. Kleberg of the King Ranch and Tom Armstrong of Kennedy County, both directors of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers' Association.

Referring to a Washington dispatch saying Norris E. Dodd, Undersecretary of Agriculture, had laughed in commenting on a statement by Richard Kleberg of Texas that the Governments' eradication program had been a failure, Armstrong said:

"We and the public have been deliberately misled on the whole matter and we don't like to be laughed at."

Hits Administration Flaws

Armstrong said there "never had been a complete slaughter program."

In the Washington story, Armstrong said, Dodd referred to the Kleberg statement with these words: "'He's been saying the same thing since the program began. I'm not surprised.'"

"That's the trouble we have had with the whole thing," Armstrong commented. "Dodd is a political man and doesn't know anything about cattle and foot and mouth disease. Kleberg is a cattle raiser and knows.

"Statements like that from Dodd are the thing that is responsible for the breakdown in the control program. There never has been a complete slaughter program. This thing has to be done and done right. The program has never had a proper administration and we insist on a good one, regardless of cost."

In Washington, Dodd told newsmen he had nothing further to say about the matter except that "I own a ranch in Oregon, still operate it and have made by living off cattle most of my life."

Robert Kleberg said the joint announcement from Mexico City and Washington was "sprung on us suddenly without giving us an opportunity to be heard. We resent it."

He and Armstrong said there had been no advance indication from the Department of Agriculture of the change, and that its latest printed bulletins had been to the contrary.

Armstrong said he was going today to his ranch, and then to Washington to continue the association's fight.

Sanitary District Plan Faces Opposition of Fairfax Group

A mass meeting to organize opposition to the establishment of a sanitary district in northeastern Fairfax County will be held Tuesday evening at the McLean Parish Hall, or at the McLean School if permission is given.

The meeting will be sponsored by the Taxpayers Protective Association, a group of 22 men formed this week to oppose the project. They have asked Attorney Wilson M. Farr of Fairfax to represent them when the question of establishing the district comes before Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown.

Objections to forming the district which enable the children of the McLean-Langley-Chesterbrook area to install their own water and sewage disposal systems, are that taxes would be increased, the rural atmosphere would disappear and that speculation on future growth to pay for initial expense is too much of a gamble.

Richard M. Smith, one of the group, said he plans to expand his water company to serve all of McLean. His McLean Water Works nows supplies water to 142 of the 363 homes in McLean, Smith said.

A sewer system could be installed for $100,000, he added.

Proponents of the sanitary district claim water and sewage facilities for the seven square mile district can be provided for $1,700,000. They claim that by the most conservative estimate the project would be self liquidating in 40 years.

Proper Firing and Insulation Saves Up to 50% in Fuel

Home owners can save as much as 50 per cent on their heating bills this winter by careful furnace-firing and a bit of insulation, Director James Boyd of the Bureau of Mines said yesterday.

Boyd said such practices will help to ward off fuel shortages which, in some areas, may become acute.

Boyd said the bureau has prepared two free and one 10-cent pamphlet on home fuels and insulation. Some of the suggestions they present:

1. The house may be kept somewhat cooler during the day than in the evening, if the air is kept properly humidified. It is economical to let a house cool off after bedtime even though additional heat is needed in the morning to restore normal temperatures.

2. Keep plenty of fuel in the furnace, but control the volume of air. Plug any air leaks in the heater with steel wool or furnace cement.

3. Before shoveling fresh coal into the furnace, hoe the upper layer of the fuel bed aside so that the redhot fuel can be raked back over the top of the bed after firing, to ignite unburned gases.

4. Shake ashes down gently, and stop when red particles fall into the ash pit. Use a poker gently if at all, for ashes stirred up in the hot flame melt and form clinkers.

Boyd said weather-stripping saves up to 15 to 20 per cent of fuel consumption, weather-stripping plus storm windows 25 to 30 per cent, and double windows plus weather-stripping and half-inch insulation, about 50 per cent.

Transfer Of Schools

Now that the policy of transferring five elementary schools from white to Negro occupancy has been finally adopted by the Board of Education and preparations for the shifts are under way, we surmise that the opposition will subside. No one supposed at any time that this adjustment sponsored by Superintendent of Schools Corning would be an ideal arrangement. People who have had hopes of obtaining new schools can scarcely be expected to turn handsprings when they are offered old buildings with obsolete equipment. But the choice was not between this transfer and an ideal situation but between this transfer and indefinite continuation of part-time classes for the 3301 Negro students that the schools in question will accommodate. In these circumstances we think the Board of Education undoubtedly made the right decision.

Not all the Negro groups represented at last week's hearings opposed the transfer. Leonard S. Hayes, who spoke for 15 Negro organizations, expressed the belief that the advantages of a full-time program for a larger number of students "far outweighed the disadvantages" of using "old, decrepit school buildings." This straightforward and reasonable view stood out in sharp contrast to the attitude of some groups which demanded new schools or nothing and still others which seemed to resent any progress toward better education for Negro children until segregation can be wiped out. We are glad that neither of these arbitrary viewpoints prevailed, and hope that all citizens will now cooperate in effecting the transfer with the least possible friction.

The object to be sought, of course, is the improvement of educational opportunities for the entire community. It is inexcusable, as we have frequently said before, for the local authorities to have planned their school-building program so that shortages resulting in part-time classes are concentrated largely in the Negro schools. But the board cannot wipe out the mistakes of the past at a single stroke. When it makes a genuine effort to distribute its present facilities on a more equitable basis, we think the board is entitled to the support of all citizen groups.

Miranda's Mesmerism

The "offer" of Argentine's Economic Czar, Miguel Miranda, to sell grain at "world market prices" provided the United States will sell Argentina everything it needs at factory prices is an attempt to mix oil and water. What Mr. Miranda either forgets or neglects to mention is that American foreign trade, unlike Argentina's, is not price-managed by the Government. When Argentina offers wheat for export at twice the United States price, as it is now doing, the Argentine government is the agent and reaps the profit. Here of course there is a free market in foreign trade—aside from export restrictions—and the Government has no say in the price. Even for Argentina to sell wheat at the "world market price"—which we suppose is the current price on American grain exchanges of approximately $3 a bushel—would leave the Peron government a neat royalty over the sum it pays farmers, even with the recently announced increase in purchase price.

There can be little doubt of Argentina's need for all sorts of machinery and industrial equipment. Argentina never qualified for lend-lease because of her pro-Nazi attitude and her diffidence in entering the war, and she thus received no industrial replacements from the United States. She of course has no one to blame but herself. It is thus not surprising that some of her equipment is worn out. Use of synthetic fuels such as corn and linseed oil during the war contributed to the deterioration, especially in transportation facilities. Possibly, too, there is some truth in Mr. Miranda's allegation that Argentina has had to pay up to 100 per cent above factory prices for what machinery she has been able to buy in this country since the war. Of course no foreign trade is carried on at factory prices. Middlemen and exporters are a part of the normal channel of our export trade. At least part of Argentina's difficulty is occasioned by the fact that she has had plenty of money to spend and in some instances has bid up the price herself.

What Mr. Miranda apparently still does not understand is that there remains a critical shortage of most of the industrial items Argentina is trying to buy from us. What the United States must do, through the medium of export controls, is to weigh the needs of Argentina against the considerably greater needs of war-ravaged Europe under the Marshall Plan. Undoubtedly officials would be considerably more sympathetic to Argentina's requirements if there were some vestige of quid pro quo—in other words, if the Peron government were to make a definite commitment as to what it would do toward European recovery instead of mouthing pious wishes while using world scarcity as a tool to build up Peron's extraterritorial power. But all that Mr. Miranda has to suggest, in his pose of injured innocence, is that the United States give Argentina preferential treatment and in effect adopt the Peron system of managed trade with the Government acting as collector as well as seller. The Miranda "offer" is little short of blackmail, and we hope the United States will have no part of it.

Holy Shenanigans

An ancient and fishlike smell comes out of Lake Success on the eve of the vote on Palestine. It is the smell of chicanery. The majority report of United Nation's commission favoring the partition of Palestine is about to be presented to the Assembly. It is the same old recommendation that has been forthcoming out of every commission since Britain's Peel's Commission of 1937. Supporting the recommendation are the United States and the Soviet Union. It is the only issue of any moment so far considered at Lake Success on which the two greatest powers on earth have been united. When Marshall and Vishinsky stood side by side on Palestine, a breath of hope seemed to pervade the Assembly—and the outside world. The man in the street felt that, in spite of everything, there might be something in the United Nations besides a sounding board of irreconcilable dissension. Now he is left wondering. There is danger that with the defection of Greece, the Philippines, and Liberia, the two-thirds vote necessary for partition will not be mustered. If the United Nations refuses to accept the majority report of its own commission when its two dominant leaders are backing it, what is he to think? He can think only that there is something amiss which he will call backroom politics.

What else can one call the latest report out of Lake Success that Greece, the Philippines, and Liberia will vote against partition? All three of them owe their independence to the United States. All of them are still leaning on us. It is incredible that they have reached their decision on Palestine without taking account of the American stand. Yet our American stand is for partition. The mystery of the deviation of Greece, the Philippines, and Liberia is fathomable only in terms of the attitude of the State Department officials that Secretary Marshall left behind when he went to London. We refuse to think that Marshall, the straightest man in our public life, says one thing in public and another in the U. N. anterooms. The motto of his life has been "Don't fight a problem: meet it." It looks to us as if Greece, the Philippines, and Liberia have had a high sign to take no notice of the pro-partition stand that was American policy on the departure of Marshall. No other explanation of the position of Greece, the Philippines, and Liberia makes any sense.

The bad effect of any headlines tomorrow, "The Assembly votes against the United States and the Soviet Union," cannot be exaggerated. The finger will be pointed at the puissant United States for playing politics in world councils—of getting the best out of all possible worlds, of being all things to all men. The issue lies with our delegation. If they don't keep the faith tomorrow, partition will be defeated, and the name of the United States will be smeared. To be sure, an affirmative decision involves risks, great risks—but only thanks to the record of procrastination and pusillanimity with which the problem of Palestine has been handled since 1937. But a negative decision involves equally great risks, especially now that the British are determined to get out of Palestine by August 1. And the risk that would attach to our name in the event of defeat overshadows all else. It has been the absence of that priceless ingredient of statesmanship—to wit, courage—that has made a mess out of what hitherto has been a soluble problem. Is the lack of honor to be put with it at the bar of history?

Food Goals

The primary reason behind the increased 1948 farm production goals announced by Secretary Anderson is of course the tremendous need for food as one of the basic tools of the European Recovery Program. It is already evident that food will be at a premium well through the next year and probably longer, and we shall have need for all the production we can reasonably attain. Beyond this it seems to us that Secretary Anderson is aiming at a permanently expanded American food output. This amounts to recognition of the most glaring fact in the present world food picture, namely, that production has not kept pace with the increase in population. For example, there are now 200 million more people in the world than there were in 1940. If the world standard of living is to rise from the semi-starvation level that prevails in many countries, more and more food will be required, and undoubtedly the United States will have to supply some of it.

The immediate danger in expanding our crop goals by nine million acres is the possibility of overworking the land. Our agricultural facilities have been under a severe strain for seven years. Ordinarily land which has produced so magnificently should be left fallow or seeded in other crops. Consequently, to prevent actual deterioration, it will be absolutely necessary to intensify soil conservation. Increased acreage implies more use of fertilizer and speeded up erosion control. One of the problems will be that of marginal production on land that ordinarily would not be cultivated or would be used for binder crops. In the Great Plains area the overuse of such land was in part responsible for the growth of the dust bowl. Happily much of the increased acreage is in corn, sorghum grains and rye rather than wheat. Thus there will not be a great impetus for marginal wheat cultivation by "suitcase farmers."

At a time of such widespread need, it may seem inconsistent to talk of agricultural surpluses. It is inconceivable that there will be an actual world surplus any time within the foreseeable future. Nonetheless, it is not beyond possibility that the time will come when American productive capacity will be a drug because other countries lack the means to pay for the food they need. Moreover, with intensive efforts to lessen dependence of other countries on the United States by promoting indigenous food production, it is by no means certain that American agriculture will always be able to compete in price. The problem thus is one of balance—of extending our facilities to meet the immediate need and at the same time of not overexpanding. The ultimate objective toward which we should work, of course, is broadened world food consumption, and along with it a supranational method of reconciling production with demand so as to obviate the difficulties of purely national surpluses when and if they occur.

Hollywood Purge

The movie magnates of Hollywood have an indisputable right, of course, to dismiss such employes as they please—provided such action entails no breach of contract. And their desire to dismiss Communists is an altogether understandable one; indeed we are entirely in sympathy with their announced intention to hire no known Communists in the future. All the same, we think the industry was ill-advised in firing the 10 men just cited for contempt of Congress because they defied the Committee on Un-American Activities. The industry's spokesman, Eric Johnston, declared loftily that "we are not going to be swayed by hysteria or intimidation from any source." But the surrender rather belies him.

No one can reasonably dispute that the actions of the 10 men have been, as Mr. Johnston said, "a disservice to their employers and have impaired their usefulness to the industry." Their actions robbed them, indeed, of the respect of most Americans. Their right to do what they did, however, is now to be tested in the courts. It would be well, therefore, to await the outcome of this test before penalizing them. The action of the industry in dismissing them not only presumes that they are Communists but presumes in addition that they were required by law to admit they were Communists when Representative Thomas asked them. Five of the 10 men are under contract to Hollywood studios. Are these contracts to be blithely canceled on the basis of these presumptions? We should suppose that the movie magnates would not care to establish such a precedent.

More serious, however, from the point of view of the motion picture industry, is the acceptance which this action implies of a congressional committee's right to interfere with the industry's personnel policies. Mr. Johnston may believe that he is not yielding to intimidation on the part of Mr. Thomas. But he is certainly not uninfluenced by the publicity which Mr. Thomas was able to direct at him and his clients. The employment of publicity in this way seems to us an interference not only with the personnel policies of Hollywood employers but also with essential freedom of the screen. For the content of Hollywood films can be very largely determined by the character of Hollywood workers. Nothing can be more important to Mr. Johnston and his industry than to resist interference of this kind by any governmental agency.

Postmaster General

Nothing has been so rare in Washington, it seems, as a career man in a top administrative job. In many cases, nominees for important Government posts have lacked familiarity with the duties they have been asked to assume. Of all the appointments at the President's discretion, the Postmaster Generalship has been traditionally the most purely political. In recent years it has been associated with the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee, and the candidate knowledge of postal matters has had only an incidental bearing if any on the selection.

Mr. Donaldson is in all senses of the phrase a career man. He began as a postal clerk 42 years ago, later was a letter carrier, and most recently has been First Assistant Postmaster General. His promotion to the Cabinet gives a healthy and needed boost to the career service by opening a new vista for aspiration. Mr. Donaldson will bring to his office not only an intimate acquaintance with the details of his work but also the respect of his subordinates. The ultimate effect should be more value received for the taxpayer's dollar. We congratulate both Mr. Donaldson and President Truman on the appointment.

WEATHERVANE

Breasting invisible surf of wind the golden cockerel rides,
Washed by unfathomed seas of sun and burnished by rain,
Arched for imminent crowing, but silent upon these tides
Of weather the bronze bird steers the course of his vane.

Now eastward the golden arrow pierces an iron-gray sky
Under lowering clouds and a smell of approaching snow;
Now westward into the azure air with cirrus clouds blown high
Turns the glittering bird, wings lifted, but never to crow.

High on the apex of steeple, unchanging prophet of change,
Unmindful of days or the hour's inexorable
chime,
Charting his passage through stars he finds nothing strange

Sex Crimes

The Washington Post last week reported that a man named John Hall has been recommended by a District jury to receive the death sentence for having raped an 8-year old girl. That sex crimes require stringent measures goes without saying, yet in the face of this punishment two thoughts must come to many of your readers as they learn of this sad affair.

First, the ancient lex talionis when it was first formulated was a great advance in law since it prevented unlimited retaliation by stating that the punishment must not exceed the crime. Many today would go beyond this law to bring into question the whole theory of punishment for crime, favoring rather the reformation or restraint of the law breaker. Here in the case of John Hall neither of these principles is regarded. No attempt has been made to reform or cure him; nor is the lex talionis observed. The death penalty far exceeds the crime itself, and so carries us back to precivilized forms of punishment.

Second, society—by which we mean the citizens of greater Washington—is itself grievously guilty in this matter at two places. First, because our law courts and prisons have failed up until now to recognize the true nature of sex crimes, and the methods for treating them, although ample knowledge has been available for many years to obtain rational forms of cure or restraint.

The fact that the "treatment" prescribed for Hall for another offense of similar nature was a long prison sentence at Lorton indicates the kind of unimaginative and unintelligent methods by the use of which we have failed to solve problems of this nature. The prosecuting attorney in this later trial is reported to have urged that for this offense Hall be executed since it would be too dangerous to place him in prison only to have him later released again into society. This statement is the measure of the indictment which can be brought against our failure, for which we project our share of the guilt onto a scapegoat.

Further, Hall was drunk at the time he committed the crime. One wonders how many crimes must be committed by men and women who under normal conditions would not lose control of themselves but who have become victims of alcohol, before something is done to control the sale of alcohol itself. Has society, have we citizens, no share of the responsibility? Is this, too, a place where we place all the responsibility upon the few who are guilty, but not solely so? Society ideally uses law to protect itself. This implies that it must use restrictions on those influences which invite lawlessness. Of these, alcohol heads the list.

That something needs to be done with John Hall is evident, but there is only one word for the solution contained in the jury's recommendation. That word is "injustice." L. CALVIN KEENE.

Food Controls

Why perpetuate controls when we know they will fail in the end?

Look at the Prohibition Act and what a colossal failure that proved to be; again the Blue Eagle, NRA, which met the same fate; and now the OPA, which had no more chance than the two controls that have gone before.

You can't seal the stomachs of the American people by laws, nor can you drive out the competitive system of free enterprise. Controls are a stupendous failure when it comes to food and drink and the other necessities of life.

We stood for being put in a strait-jacket during the war, but it is time to take that plate of armor off and live as free men again. Men and women from war-torn foreign lands have emigrated to this country and shed their blood and lives to keep this Nation free of the controls that existed in their home lands, that virtually kept them in servitude. It is up to the American Congress to put an end to those controls that endanger our freedom of action.

Our Administration as well as its predecessor have gone too far with certain controls and it is time to call a halt. Free competition should bring down prices and limit wage demands. It takes time to stabilize things from war conditions back to peace.

Vigilante Justice

A police officer was investigating a robbery on 11th st. Tuesday.

"I'd like to have caught that fellow halfway through the window," he said. "Then I'd have had something to show the newspaper reporters! Shoot a few robbers and we wouldn't have any more trouble. The courts won't do anything."

The officer's remarks prompt these questions:

Does he sometimes render vigilante justice? Do we have vigilantes on the D. C. police force? Are the courts ineffective in the prevention of crime? Do we know better ways of handling criminals than jailing or shooting them? Is private property more sacred than human life? F. E. P.

Boom And Bust

I congratulate you on your "Boom and Bust" cartoon of November 23. There is a curious juxtaposition, however, in the same issue—a nearly full page advertisement seeking to induce people who can't afford it to go into debt hundreds of dollars for a television set for no money down. Where is the consistency?

Colored Margarine

I have been very much interested recently in reading editorials and letters to the editor in at least two of our Washington papers regarding the indefensible oleomargarine racket, and I most earnestly hope to see the agitation continued until an apathetic Congress wakes up to the situation and does something about it.

Most of what I have seen in the papers has seemed to bear mostly on the inequity of the special tax on colored oleo. Why should there be any tax on any oleo? If that tax is just, why not tax axle grease, fountain pens, or skullcaps?

As to the special tax on colored oleo, why not tax colored butter? Not an ounce of the real article goes to market until it is colored artificially, particularly in the winter. Green grass will make butter of a pretty fair color! but not dry hay.

"Dismantlement"

Your November 23 editorial, "Dismantlement," with its attack on Senator Bridges, is "off the beam."

First it raises the bugaboo of German rearmament. When the tremendous destruction in Germany is considered the bugaboo of German rearmament is only propaganda. Some may argue that the Germans came back after World War I but there was no destruction of Germany in that war.

Raising this bugaboo about Germany and Japan serves only to befuddle the present-day international picture and leads one to believe that the writer of such nonsense is still living in the 1930s. We have overcome the German and Japanese hurdle and are now faced with a far greater one, Russia. Therefore it would seem common sense to concentrate on promoting a friendly Japan and Germany. They never will be the menace that Russia already is today.

Second, to argue that "the gains to the countries receiving German equipment will constitute offsets to the potential losses suffered by Germany" is misleading and particularly stupid in today's world economic picture. The equipment in a plant is a small part of the value of an effective producing unit. To state that moving equipment from Japan to China or to the Philippines or from Germany to Russia will result in a burst of production, to say the least, overlooks the simple facts of economic life. To have a producing plant there must be skilled labor, a way of distributing the products, construction ability and management "know-how."

Further when the problems of breakage, deterioration from lack of maintenance during the moving period, and those of integrating the equipment that is moved with other equipment are considered, and the fact that the buildings and much equipment are not moveable, it is evident that only a small percentage of a plant being removed is ever used. But the economic waste of destroying a useful plant is great and the additional drain on the United States taxpayer and economy is tremendous.

Third, it can be argued that at most any plant contributes to modern warfare, but one wouldn't think of destroying food processing plants to prevent wars. However, when nitrate plants are destroyed, fertilizer capacity is reduced and destruction of certain plants which could aid in explosives manufacture results in a reduction in the capacity for making synthetic fabrics for much-needed clothing.

Further, it seems that the suppression of a people's abilities for production by imposition of despotic arbitrarily low levels of economy is either a negative and very unimaginative way of preventing war, particularly when it is imposed by a democratic people who believe in freedom of expression and the betterment of the human race, or a method for revenge or elimination of competition. It would seem far better to trade a destructive program reminiscent of the killing of pigs and plowing under of cotton and corn in the 1930s for a progressive, constructive policy and to have faith in our ability to win and hold friends.

Friendship Train

I have been following the reports of the Friendship Trains in Drew Pearson's column in The Washington Post. However, that is about the only mention I find in your paper of these trains. Don't you think this is important enough news to publish?

I notice you gave plenty of space to Princess Elizabeth's wedding, not that that is not news but I think something which concerns all Europe and will have very important political results if played up right, is more important. After all, there are plenty of people who have only heard of the Friendship Train and due to lack of publicity have it confused with the Freedom Train, which is entirely different.

Washington Calling

Farm Prospect

AMES, Iowa.—Out of the good black earth of the Midwest have come, in recent years, such bounteous harvests as the farmer of yesterday never dreamed of. The increasing use of machinery and of new scientific techniques applied to plants and animals contributed to this flow of wealth that went into the balance on the side of victory in the war.

Now the same abundance is essential to win the peace. The sights are set for four to five years of maximum production, granted always, of course, that the factor of weather is not too unfavorable.

Here at Iowa State College of Agriculture are many of the experts who have put science on the farm. Dean Robert E. Buchanan of the graduate college was one of the 20 members of the Harriman Committee who framed that impressive report on American capacities and American resources.

These experts are concerned not merely with the immediate production problem. They are looking at the longer future and trying to appraise the productive value of this black earth a hundred years from now.

On the whole they are optimistic. They believe that, if present methods of soil conservation are extended and better techniques developed and applied to varying types of soils, then there is no reason why production should not be as high in 2047 as it is today. In other words, they do not feel that the soil is being too drastically mined out by the bumper crops of recent years.

A LOT of things have happened in the past two decades to stop the waste of what is, in the last analysis, the country's most vital asset. One was the Roosevelt farm program begun in 1933. Even in Republican Iowa they are willing to admit that. It became both practical and profitable to follow conservation principles.

With the spread of scientific knowledge, farmers began to use new and more potent fertilizers. But with all this, there is no room for complacency. The experts point to the pressing need for more research which will make it possible to apply specialized treatment to soils of varying types.

Certainly, when you cast up the national soil account, you see the need for far more effort than has been put into conservation so far. It works out roughly as follows:

In the United States about 460 million acres of good crop land are left. Of this, 80 million need clearing, and irrigation or drainage. Of the total, more than 100 million acres are now being operated on sound soil conservation principles.

This looks fairly encouraging until you put it alongside human needs. It takes about 3 [illegible] a person to supply a minimum diet and the raw materials for clothing and shelter. Multiply the estimated population in 1960 by three and you come out with a deficit. Even by 1950 we will need 410 million acres of good land in production to sustain present levels of living and continue normal food exports.

THAT MEANS it is urgently necessary to get part of the unreclaimed 80 million acres ready for use. It means that the national and State soil conservation services must extend their work at once.

This is imperative because land damage is proceeding at a faster rate than conservation for the Nation as a whole. An estimated one fourth of our crop land is being damaged, primarily by erosion, at a critical rate. Another large area is being damaged at a serious rate. Yet, at the last session Congress cut down a requested appropriation for conservation research from $1,423,000 to $1,048,000. It ought to be 10 times that amount.

In Texas and Oklahoma, the dust is beginning to blow again. There the farmer has been trading his soil for a bumper crop. The bill will shortly be coming due, as it came due once before, in terms of human misery.

Here at Iowa State College, the weight of the experts is all in favor of farming as a way of life. They are using their influence to discourage land speculation and to encourage farmers to put boom-time profits back into soil development and better buildings.

They are heartened by the increase in the number of farm owners. Farms operated by tenants in Iowa have dropped from 52 per cent in 1937 to 42 per cent at the beginning of the current year. You hear remarkable stories of ambitious young men who have paid for their farms in three or four years, and even in two years.

Whether it is profits and practicality or idealism and a new interest in the world—more likely a combination of both—the Midwest is abandoning its isolationism. That is a fact of greatest political significance for America and Europe.

Aid For China

By Mark Sullivan

Dewey's Anti-Communist Program

ON MONDAY Governor Dewey of New York, in a formal speech urging that we aid China to resist communism, declared that at least "modest aid" should be included in the bills for aid to Europe. "If at least some aid is not given immediately by these bills," he said, "the moral effect upon our Chinese friends will be terrible beyond contemplation."

Sullivan

The following day the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, in acting on the bill for emergency aid to Europe, added 60 million dollars for China.

This could be coincidence merely, but more probably is conformance by Republicans in Congress to a recommendation by an important Republican leader. It should be added that in this step the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House was not going over the head of the Truman Administration. Sixty million dollars for China had previously been recommended by Secretary of State Marshall as a matter to be acted upon later.

In all events an extraordinary development has taken place. Resistance to communism on a world-wide basis has become a Republican policy even more fully than an Administration one. The new Republican policy, far from opposing the Administration policy or even diverging from it, actually embraces it and goes beyond it.

The dismay this meant to the Communist heads in Moscow goes deep. It destroys hopes which were more than hopes, which were bases of their belief in the invincible superiority of their system. If they expected to derive advantage from political cleavage in the United States; if they expected that, on the eve of a presidential campaign here the Republican and Democratic parties would divide; if they relied upon our two-party system and free, democratic elections as a weakness compared with their one-party system and dictatorship — in every expectation they are now frustrated. Solidarity in America makes for peace, and the Communist heads now know that America has solidarity.

WITHIN THE immense significance of this development is a minor one having also to do with the American political system. The present proponent of enlargement of our resistance to communism is not a leader in Congress nor a member of it. He is Governor of a State. He is not called upon to take leadership in foreign relations unless he is strongly moved. He is an accepted candidate for the Republican presidential nomination and in that role, so far as he felt called upon to take a position on the foreign policy of a Democratic Administration, might have confined himself to mere formal indorsement of it. A platitude about politics stopping at the water's edge would have satisfied convention.

Instead, Governor Dewey devoted the whole of a carefully thought-out speech to explanation of his policy and the reasons for it. Some passages in his speech have the special value of making clearer to our people the scope of the struggle which the course of Russian communism has forced upon us:

"We are facing one whole problem . . . We have a whole struggle on our hands, world-wide in scope . . . In America we are under attack by propaganda, falsehood and economic sabotage. Free governments in Europe are under attack by rioting, political strikes and armed violence."

ACCEPTING fully the necessity of aid to Europe, and indorsing heartily the Administration policy of providing it, Governor Dewey points out the even greater urgency of aid to China:

"But the program of Communist world conquest . . . is furthest advanced in China . . . The cold war which has become a warm war in Europe is a very hot and successful war in China. The inescapable fact is that unless we change our national policy immediately, there is good reason to believe that the 450 million people of China will soon fall wholly into Communist hands."

Governor Dewey is careful to stress the necessity of the aid we are about to give Europe: "A Communist police state in the Mediterranean and in France would be as serious a blow to the freedom of man as would have been the victory of the Axis in its recent war." But he points out that while the Communist drive in Europe may cause civil wars there, and while that is presumably the Communist purpose, the stage of civil war has actually been brought about in China.

Governor Dewey's extremely thoughtful and thorough speech includes many points bearing on principle and on action. A concretely important one has to do with immediate practicability. Materials for present aid to the Chinese government are already nearby in the Philippines, Guam, Okinawa and Japan. "Only an order is needed from Washington and they could be shipped immediately to armies where men are dying for lack of them."

Steel And Employment

By Louis H. Bean

Higher Production Sights Needed

Editor's Note: This article is an excerpt from the recent statement of Louis H. Bean before the Steel Subcommittee of the Senate Committee to Study Problems of American Small Business. Mr. Bean is a Government economist.

THE ESTIMATES (of steel required for full employment) that are now current are derived chiefly by projecting past experience and the differences in the estimates are partly due to differences in method and partly to differences in the art of analyzing records.

For example, the Department of Labor in its study of full employment patterns for 1950, covering in great detail the entire structure of production and consumption, employment, and purchasing power, finds that if in 1950 full employment is to prevail with job opportunities for 59 million persons in civilian employment and 1.5 million in the armed services, the amount of steel that would be required will range between 98 million tons and 122 million tons.

Another example is the set of estimates presented by Mr. Wilfred Sykes, president of the Inland Steel Corp.; estimates based strictly on the record of domestic and export demand for steel for the 30-year period, 1911 to 1940. But he obtains results quite different from those of the Department of Labor, whose approach is different, and also quite different from those that I now want to indicate to you, using the same records of production that Mr. Sykes uses.

IN THE record of steel production from 1900 to 1947, we are concerned primarily with the trend of production in prosperity years, since the question we are dealing with is steel requirements for full employment. The years of prosperity are 1901 and 1902, 1906 and 1907, 1909 and 1910, 1912 and 1913, 1919 and 1920, 1923, 1925 and 1926 and 1928 and 1929.

It is clear that production in these full employment years has risen steadily. A straight-line projection of this record suggests that we would have needed, and probably would have used, about 80 million tons in 1940, had that year been a year of full employment like that of 1929.

For 1947 it shows that current production is below the volume suggested by the long-time trend. It also suggests that by 1950 a condition of full employment would call for something well over 100 million tons. This projection, however, should make allowance for the changing rate of growth in the population and in the labor force.

Steel production per person in the United States also shows a rising trend. In 1901 we produced a maximum of 389 pounds per person. This was exceeded by successively higher maxima in 1903, 1905, 1906, in 1910, in 1912 and, leaving out the war years, again in 1920, when the new maximum reached 886 pounds per person. Another new high was established in 1923, again in 1926, in 1928 and in 1929.

On the basis of this rising trend in per capita consumption we could have anticipated about 1200 pounds or more in 1941. The actual figure turned out to be 1243 pounds. For 1947 the rising trend suggests about 1300 pounds, compared with an actual production for the year of something less than 1200. For 1950, if we are to have full employment, we would, on the basis of this experience, need around 1400 pounds per person, and with a total population in that year of 148 millions, total production would need to be 100 million tons, or more.

AT THIS point, it may be well to point out how some persons in the steel industry came to the conclusion that for years to come we will not need more than 80 million tons of steel. They are convinced on the basis of boom-and-bust experience, and the character of demand for their production, that steel production cannot be maintained year in and year out at a peak level. They are conditioned by the experience of the 1920s and 1930s, and assume that in the near future we shall experience again a depression as severe as that of the (highly nontypical) 1930s.

For instance, in the Annual Report of the U. S. Steel Corp. for 1946, Mr. Olds states that, on the basis of past experience, the long-term outlook for the corporation is for the average use of about two thirds of its capacity. This is approximately its experience for the period 1920 to 1940. Their use of the averages for 10- and 20-year periods, as Mr. Sykes does when he cites the average per capita domestic demand for 1911 to 1920 as 666 pounds (including abnormally high war years) and for 1921 to 1940 as 668 pounds (including the extremely low years after 1929) tends to hide the really significant upward trend in prosperity years; the upward trend that has characterized and apparently still characterizes the growth of the steel industry.

Finally, having concluded that there is bound to be a falling off in demand, and having found corroboration of a stable and lower than present demand in the misleading averages, their most optimistic assumption with regard to future maximum demand is that it will not exceed the maximum reached in 1929. On the basis of the 1929 figures, now 18 years old, Mr. Sykes and others conclude that demand for the expected population of 1950 and 1955 will be about 76 and 78 million tons, respectively.

THE 76-million-ton estimate for 1950, in view of the need of 100 millions or more, is in effect about in line with the production of 1939 when 16 per cent of the labor force was unemployed or on relief. The 78-million-ton figure for 1955, with a still greater steel requirement for full employment, would be in line with the trend in production for 1933, 1934, 1935, and 1938, when we had about 20 per cent unemployment. These estimates, were they to materialize, could mean 10 to 12 million persons unemployed in the early 1950s, unless other products of services substitute for steel.

The central feature of the foregoing analysis is, of course, the difference between the pessimistic view of the steel industry leaders and the continued expansion in demand as clearly revealed by the long-time trends. From the standpoint of public welfare, it is important to recognize that the lower estimates of requirements are in error in that they rest on the assumption of a constant level of per capita demand when, as a matter of fact, the record clearly reveals it to have been a vigorously rising demand with no evidence of any prospective halt or downturn in that upward trend.

That kind of error can be costly to the industry, to farmers, to the country as a whole, and to world recovery, for it leads to a slower rate of capacity expansion not only in steel but in other key industries, directly and indirectly dependent on steel. It would tend to check industrial expansion and job opportunities. Once large-scale unemployment developed, the task of finding the necessary job opportunities in private enterprise would be proportionate to the shortage in steel production below that required for full employment.

2 to Explain Price Curb Proposals

By the United Press

Secretary of Commerce W. Averell Harriman and Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder go before the Joint Congressional Economic Committee today to explain further President Truman's program to curb high prices.

Chairman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said the committee wants from Snyder an elaboration of the bank credit request in the Administration's 10-point program.

Harriman is slated for further questioning on the testimony he gave Wednesday. The committee hopes for more detail of Administration plans for allocating industrial materials.

On another phase of the program, Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board has suggested that the board be given power to require banks to set up temporary, special reserves behind their deposits in addition to present reserve requirements.

Spokesmen for the Nation's bankers are slated to tell the committee next week why they oppose Eccles' suggestion.

There is no indication how soon the House or Senate will act on any of the proposals in Mr. Truman's program, but it is unlikely that any bills will be ready for the floor next week.

Administration bills are being drafted by Democratic leaders in hope that the Republicans will give them bipartisan support. Republican leaders already have introduced measures to extend export controls and to restore installment buying curbs—two of the Administration requests that may get action this year.

Labor Candidate Wins By-Election To Parliament

London, Nov. 27 (AP).—Britain's Labor Party today acclaimed its victory in the hard-fought Gravesend by-election as two more British constituencies voted to fill parliamentary vacancies.

The Labor Party yesterday elected Sir Richard Acland over Conservative Frank Taylor by a vote of 24,692 to 23,017, to fill the vacancy of the Gravesend constituency, 15 miles east of London.

Labor thus maintained a record of not losing a parliamentary seat since the 1945 general campaign, despite Conservative gains in recent municipal elections.

The results of today's voting in the usually Conservative Yorkshire constituency of Howdenshire and in East Edinburgh, a Labor stronghold, are expected to be known tomorrow. The campaigns in both constituencies have been unspectacular, and the results were looked upon as a foregone conclusion.

Official Wounded While Shooting Quail With Franco

Madrid, Spain, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Undersecretary of Agriculture Emilio Lamo de Espinosa was seriously wounded by an accidental shotgun blast yesterday while shooting partridges with Generalissimo Francisco Franco and a distinguished group of other government leaders, it was made known today.

As the result, Franco was understood to have called off the shoot on the Calle la Ventilla estate in Toledo Province.

The shooting party was out at twilight, the most dangerous hour for gunning at fast-flying birds, when the accident occurred. Lamo suffered wounds in the chest and abdomen.

Nobody could tell who fired the blast which wounded Lamo.

Hoffman Plans Showdown on 'Secret' Files

By The Associated Press

Representative Hoffman (R., Mich.) is going to have a showdown with the Government's executive departments on how much they should cooperate with Congress.

Specifically, he means cooperation with the House Executive Expenditures Committee, of which he is chairman.

For instance, he is interested in the paroles of four former Capone gangsters. A Federal grand jury in Chicago is looking into them.

"But the Justice Department is not cooperating with us in that case," Hoffman said today in an interview. "The FBI has closed its files to us."

Secret File Maintained

In September, the Civil Service Commission refused to allow his committee to have a look at a secret le kept by its investigators for checking people who apply for Government jobs. It admitted that some Congressmen's names were in the file, admitted that they shouldn't be, and promised to remove their cards at once.

"They said they would send us a list of the names removed," Hoffman said, "but we haven't heard from them yet."

Then there is a proposed security order recently circulated among executive departments setting out what information would be classed as secret and what would be released to the public.

One of Hoffman's subcommittees, headed by Representative Harness (R., Ind.), is looking into that.

"We eventually will have to settle, once and for all, how much information these departments can keep from Congress, how much cooperation they have to give us," Hoffman said.

But the outlook is not all dark, said the Congressman. He feels good about indictments handed down this week in Philadelphia against three labor union leaders.

"They are a clear vindication of the committee," he said. "We will find out whether the Hobbs Anti-Racketeering Act is enough to stop the sort of thing they were doing in Philadelphia. That is what the committee has been after all along."

Hoffman's committee investigated the union officers last spring in connection with their activities at the Dock Street Market in Philadelphia.

Act to Be Tested

The three are Harry Daniels, Abraham Goldberg and Fred Schlein, who were indicted along with the Wholesale Fruit and Vegetable Distributors, Inc., Local 929 of the Perishable Fruit and Produce Haulers Association, and the Produce, Poultry, Fish and Oystermen Drivers and Helpers Union (AFL).

The charge is conspiracy to interfere with interstate commerce through intimidation, extortion and other illegal means. Such interference was made unlawful last years when Congress passed a bill sponsored by Representative Hobbs (D., Ala.).

Mihai Returns Today

London, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Romanian legation said today King Mihai, who flew in his own plane from Bucharest to London for the wedding of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip, would take off tomorrow for the return trip. The legation said reports that Mihai might not go back to Romania was "quite untrue."

Pension Law for Legislators Year Old—and That's All

By the United Press

The new congressional retirement system has been in operation for nearly a year now but information on who is participating is about as hush-hush as atomic energy.

The Civil Service Commission, which administers Federal retirement, said yesterday that it was bound by a law forbidding disclosure of the names of the beneficiaries.

"Once a Congressman joins the system, he becomes simply another annuitant," a commission spokesman said.

House Sergeant at Arms William Russell, who is responsible for seeing that the contributions of House members reach the system, also was mum. He said he was bound by the Civil Service rules.

The system was set up under the Congressional Reorganization Act of 1946 to give Congressmen the same "break" in their old age that other Federal jobholders receive.

Under the program, a Congressman must kick in 6 per cent of his base pay for at least five years. This contribution is matched by the Government on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

To receive benefits, however, he must be at least 62 years old. His benefits are 2½ per cent of his average annual base salary multiplied by his number of years of service.

On the basis of the present $12,500-a-year salary scale in the House, a member who served the minimum five years would get $1572. If he served 20 years, he would get $6250 a year.

Some Congressman, while not blaming the Civil Service Commission, disagree with the veil of secrecy around congressional pensions.

One Democrat who was instrumental in drawing up the Reorganization Act, said that because Congressmen were elected public officials, their case was different from that of the average member of the over-all retirement system.

156 In House Counted In

"I don't see why congressional pensions shouldn't be a matter of public record," he said. "But it apparently would take an act of Congress to change the law."

A top House Republican leader indicated, however, that there was little chance of such a law getting through the present Congress.

"I don't see why a Congressman should be any different from anyone else under the Federal retirement system," he said. "I see no reason to publicize their participation."

When the system first was set up, Russell did disclose that 156 members of the House in the Seventy-ninth Congress—including 41 who did not seek reelection or were defeated—had indicated they would participate.

But he promptly had his knuckles rapped by the Civil Service Commission with its no-publicity law.

Pension for A. J. May?

One of the former members who filed for retirement pay was Andrew J. May, former chairman of the old House Military Affairs Committee who was convicted in connection with May-Garsson war frauds case.

The commission refused to disclose whether May has ever received a pension. May himself is now busy setting up a law office in his native Prestonsburg, Ky., while awaiting the outcome of an appeal from his conviction.

Need Stressed for Additional Air Engineers

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

American air power is hobbled today by a serious shortage of trained air engineer batallions, a ranking official declares.

A powerful air force with its threat of retaliation is held by defense leaders to be our greatest safeguard against attack. Yet present United States bombers cannot reach vital centers of the Old World from bases here nor do we have now advance bases within reach.

Brig. Gen. Samuel D. Sturgis, chief Air Force engineer, holds that the best present answer to this dilemma is an adequate force of highly skilled engineers capable of moving in with airborne troops at some outlying point and swiftly building air bases under fire.

Battalions Under Strength

Today, we have 15 battalions of air engineers, most of them greatly under strength and scattered, Sturgis said in an interview. They number but 12,000 men, and we need more than three times this force, he states.

"If another major war comes in the foreseeable future," Sturgis declares, "It will begin with a scramble for air bases. The war can be wwon or lost in the early stages depending on which side gets the available sites within bombing range of the other and gets them operating."

Pointing to Guadacanal and the battle for Buna in New Guinea, the Air Force engineer declared that the speed with which fighter strips can be built may be the determining factor. If fighters can gain air supremacy within the first few days, the outpost can be held and expanded into a bomber base.

"Hastily organized civilian engineers or even Army engineers without training in air base building cannot do the job," Sturgis says. "Highly skilled specialists are needed under such circumstances. They must be disciplined soldiers, willing to work through air raid alerts until the bombs begin dropping close and able to fight off enemy paratroopers if necessary."

Air Engineers Under Army

General Sturgis built air bases under fire for MacArthur's army throughout the Southwest Pacific during the war. He feels that present Army and Air Force thinking is too much dominated by European experience. Most top officials today are veterans of the war with Germany where the air base situation was very different from that in the Pacific.

"Engineers made up 25 to 30 per cent of General Krueger's Sixth Army," he states. "In Europe the proportion of Engineer troops was much smaller—from 5 to 8 per cent."

General Sturgis would not comment on the present status of his Air Engineers, which remain under the Army in accordance with one of the unification agreements. But other Air Force officers hold that the problem he raises cannot be solved as long as the USAF only "borrows" its Engineers from the Army.

4 Killed at Crossing

Auburn, N. Y., Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Four persons were killed here today when a Lehigh Valley Railroad train struck their passenger car at a grade crossing. Police identified the dead as Mario Ferro, 27; his wife, Josephine, 22; their daughter, Dolores, 5, and their nephew, John Demarzio, 3, all of Auburn.

Austerity at Court

London, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Buckingham Palace set the royal seal on another year of ocial austerity today by announcing that King George and Queen Elizabeth will not hold court next spring and summer. Instead, garden parties will be held at Buckingham Palace which will count as court presentations.

Molten Steel Burns Fatal

Youngstown, Ohio, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Two men died of burns and four others were injured today when a ladle containing 150 tons of molten steel spilled on them at the Campbell plant of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. Three workers were treated for minor burns. The fourth suffered a broken leg in his leap from the building.

State Aide Blames 'Leak' For Severance

Ottawa, Nov. 27 (AP).— Dan Doten, special assistant to United States Ambassador Ray Atherton, said today there were honts from his superiors that his resignation would be welcomed.

State Department officials in Washington said Doten, connected with the United States Embassy in Ottawa for five years, was leaving his post as a result of a general retrenchment prgoram necessitated by budget cuts.

Doten, who worked on a dossier on Edmond Turcotte, new Canadianconsul gneeral in Chicago, said he believed a move to withdraw him was connected with a leak of news that Atherton had objected to Turcotte's appointment on grouns that the latter had been accused of anti-American writings.

Atherson, reliable informants said, suggested the appointment be reconsidered. Turcotte denied his writings could be characterized as unfriendly.

Doten said he had discussed the Turcotte case with officials who had called him to Washington for consultation. He said he always acted under Atherton's instructions.

Lincoln White, State Department press officer in Washington, said Doten was absorbed into the Foreign Service when his job in the Office of War Information was abolished, and that his present assignment is ended.

White said Doten, if he desires, may take the usual examination for a regular Foreign Service assignment.

There was no Washington comment on the Turcotte case.

Ieither Atherton nor United States Minister Julian Harrington was available for comment today.

The Toronto Star, friendly to the government, said this evening:

"At least one member of the United States Embassy staff is leaving Canada as the result of the Edmond Turcotte affair and probably another and possibly a third will leave. The one who is leaving is Dana Doten who came here orignially to work in the embassy for the Office of War Information. Julian Harrington, United States Minister to Canada, may leave, and in the not too distant future it is likely that Ray Atherton . . . will be shifted to a new post."

Diplomatic sources said that Atherton nomally would be slated for retirement in March, 1948, under State Department age regulations.

In Chicago, Turcotte said the Doten case was news to him.

"I can only say that it is very interesting," he said.

Strike Support Weakening, Finns Report

Helsinki, Finland, Nov. 27 (AP).— The government said tonight support for a strike of more than 40,000 government employes had "weakened" among the workers.

In a communique issued after a government committee received strikers' representatives, the administration said also that telegraph and telephone connections with almost all cities were under control and that preparations were going forward to resume railway traffic.

The government ordered police today to occupy communications offices and was reported to be planning conscription measures to combat the walkout, which began at midnight Tuesday.

In sending the police into all postal and telegraph offices, which earlier had been in the hands of the strikers, the government hoped to break communications between strike headquarters in Helsinki and the provinces. The strikers are demanding increased pay.

Premier Mauno Pekkala, whose left wing Socialist Union party merged with the Communists to form a democratic union, declared the walkout constituted direct action against the government. He warned the strikers they risked loss of their jobs by their action.

Gen. A. Sihvo, commander in chief of the Finnish army, has interrupted a vacation and returned to Helsinki. An authoritative source said the governmept plans to call up all men among the strikers for "military exercises." (This would place them under control of the army).

The strikers have countered by making military rolls "disappear," other informants reported. The civil servants also have threatened to turn their strike into a total walkout which would make all the police forces idle and halt all transportation of food supplies.

Fairlington Group To Discuss Rent Hikes

Members of the Fairlington Association will meet at 8 tonight at the Fairlington School to take action on a committee recommendation against accepting new leases carrying rent increases averaging 12 per cent.

The Fairmac Corp., owners of the 3500-unit development offered the new terms last week. The tenants' association's special committee investigating the proposed increase has announced its opposition to acceptance.

Red Army's Power Held Illusionary

Former Estonian Officer Warns, However, That It Is Improving

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The power of the Soviet army is "one of the greatest illusions of our time," Arnold Purre declares in "The Reserve Officer" issued today.

Its "stoutest shield," Purre says, is the Iron Curtain under whose protection "Soviet propaganda has built up the legend of its invincibility." He warns, however, that its shortcomings probably will not be permanent; that the Soviet Union is in a constant state of preparation for world conquest and its army is being readied for that purpose.

Former Estonian Officer

Purre, according to the editor of the official organ of the Reserve Officers Association, is a former Estonian officer who was "transferred" to the Red army when his country was occupied by Russia in 1940. After fighting with the Soviet army through 1941, he escaped to Estonia and led a combat unit of his countrymen against the Russians until 1944. He now lives in Stockholm.

"In 1945," Purre writes, "the Red army itself was on the same 'invincible' level as in 1941. It can dispose of almost inexhaustible manpower, but is poorly armed, poorly equipped, poorly trained and has a low morale. A many times smaller army with up-to-date equipment and high morale can always get the better of it."

In every respect except in manpower, he says, the Russian army remained inferior to the Wehrmacht until overwhelming supplies of American lend-lease became available. Even then, Purre continues, Russian victories were won "not because they had become more powerful but because the Germans had suffered enormous losses from causes outside the influence of the Red army."

German Errors Cited

Chief among these "causes" he lists failure of the German high command to provide its troops with winter clothing and equipment in 1941, its failure to learn this lesson by 1942, German mistreatment of potential friends in occupied areas, inability to replace troops lost by cold and starvation, and inability to supply those who remained on the Russian front. He claims 1,200,000 Germans died of cold alone in the first winter of the Russian campaign.

Purre flatly denies that the German attack caught Russia by surprise. During his own service in the Red army, he relates, he attended many lectures explaining that the Red army must be used before the war ended to help the proletariat shake off the yoke of capitalism, and learned that such lectures had been frequent since 1939.

In early 1941, he says, all commanders of the Red army were required to study the German language and he was told by a political commissar in March, 1941, that "soon we shall be admiring the view from the Eiffel Tower."

Red Army Handicaps

In February, 1941, he continues, he took part in maneuvers in which the adversary was designated as German and German divisions were put in play which later actually were in the attack on Russia. When Russian "politruks" were told of British broadcasts warning of German concentrations in the east, he says, they replied that they knew all those things much better than England ever could hope to know.

The Red army suffers, Purre writes, from emphasis on political rather than military training within its ranks, from the low educational standard of its officers and from "excessive bureaucratism resulting in disorganization." He charges that the medical service is confined "mainly to an unequal struggle with vermin" and cites instances of costly delay resulting from overcentralization of authority.

"The Soviet authorities," he adds, "must surely be conscious of at least a certain number of these shortcomings, otherwise they would not hide their army even from their own citizens behind a wall of impenetrable secrecy, making it a capital offense for a soldier to speak about his detachment to outsiders and strictly forbidding soldiers of one detachment even to enter the barracks of another."

Winter Aided Russians

Purre writes that when Germany attacked, "the invincible Red army which was to annihilate the foe on his own territory fled in panic" and drastic means were instituted to force its members to fight. These measures availed little, Purre says, and "the invincibles ran as before," with "confusion and disorganization indescribable."

The Wehrmacht, he says, advanced as if "on a training exercise" until winter caught them before Moscow early in October. At that point, he recalls, a Russian counterattack by a large concentration of force "drove the freezing and disabled Germans back from the capital," but:

"It can truly be said that Moscow was saved not by the Red army, but by the cold and the snow or, more correctly still, by the mismanagement and ineptitude of the German high command that had failed to provide for winter operations."

Britons Picket Molotov for Their Russian Wives

London, Nov. 27 (AP).—A dozen former British servicemen whose Russian wives have not been able to leave Russia said tonight that they at last have won a little attention from Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov.

Several of them paraded a banner before Molotov's Russian limousine this afternoon outside the Soviet Embassy.

"Molotov's car drove slowly past us, he saw the banner, and acknowledged the fact by waving to us, reported Alfred Hall, 30, former artillery sergeant who is leading the group.

The banner, printed in both Russian and English, said: "For Soviet and British consciences—we are the husbands without our Russian wives." Russia has refused the women exit visas.

U. N. Unit Tries to Ease U. S.-Polish Breach

Mexico City, Nov. 27. (AP).—A subcommittee for the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organizaiton moved today to heal a widening breach between Poland and the United States over a proposed Polish resolution condemning "warmongering."

Actually four resolutions and one amendment were involved in the debate, which was initiated November 11 with introduction of two Polish resolutions calling for legal action by the United Nations to halt "warmongering" and to "put free flow of ideas exclusively at the disposal of friendly nations."

The Polish resolutions provoked a counter proposal by the United States, Brazil, Canada, China, India, Mexico and The Netherlands. An additional resolution was presented yesterday by France and Australia submitted an amendment to the United States document.

The upshot of yesterday's debate was the adoption, by 15 to 13, of an Egyptian resolution to appoint a subcommittee to iron out differences in the resolutions.

The United States delegation to UNESCO today asserted it had "made it clear that UNESCO shall have nothing whatsoever to do with the Franco government," except in cases where UNESCO employs Spaniards "in no way tainted by what we abhor in Fascist Franco Spain.

The subject at issue was a Uruguayan resolution, later withdrawn, which would have authorized employment of Spaniards "who are identified with the aims of the United Nations and UNESCO."

French Strikes Delay Sailing of America

Southampton, England, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—The United States Lines flagship America today delayed sailing for New York for at least 12 hours because French strikes had prevented a scheduled stop for passengers at Cherbourg.

Line officials said that 450 passengers booked to embark at Cherbourg would be brought to Britain by the Calais-Dover boat service and to Southampton by train.

Efficiency Rating System Changes To Be Announced

EFFICIENCY RATINGS: Changes in the efficiency rating system will be announced next week at the annual rating conference to be held in the Interior auditorium. They will be:

1. A provision that a supervisor "should" warn any employe whom he plans to rate unsatisfactory or fair; that the warning should be made 90 days in advance of the annual rating, and that the supervisor should tell the employe how he can improve his work and win a higher rating.

However, the warning will not be mandatory. It will be optional with the supervisor. As a practical matter, most supervisors will use the warning device. The new Civil Service regulations will say that the fact an employe wasn't warned must be taken into consideration when he appeals his fair or unsatisfactory rating.

2. Time-consuming and trouble-some special ratings will be ordered abolished. Hereafter, when an employe transfers to a new job, he'll automatically carry over his old rating for a six-month period. At the end of six months, he'll be given a regular rating and he'll be rated once a year thereafter. The only exception will be a transferred employe who has an unsatisfactory rating. His rating will be raised to fair.

3. A new provision will permit the mass of ratings to be made throughout the year instead of on March 31. It will allow annual ratings to be made on the anniversaries of entrance on duty on the change of jobs. The job of making ratings will be spread the year-over by this change.

A last-minute change by Civil Service knocked out the proposal for emergency ratings. It had been decided to allow Federal agencies to give "fair" or "unsatisfactory" ratings at any time to below-par employes. However, opposition from agencies caused the plan to be dropped.

Very few layoffs are in the works despite threats from Capitol Hill. The Internal Revenue Bureau had to cut off about 6500 trained employes last July because of a 20 million-dollar budget cut forced by Taber's committee. Since that time, two congressional committees have been investigating the efficiency of the tax-collecting agency, the House Appropriations Committee and the Joint Congressional Committee on Taxation. I understand that the latter committee has a report which says, in effect, that the revenue bureau could collect a billion or so more money in taxes if it had enough employes for the additional work. Also, revenue officials claim they could have collected upward of 400 millions more in taxes this year if the 20-million budget cut hadn't been made. It's obvious that any attempt to make additional reductions in the revenue staff will meet with stiff opposition. In fact, I'm sure the President will ask Congress for money to expand the revenue staff by at least 5000 employes . . . The outlook for employes in Treasury proper appears equally good—and if the Marshall Plan is approved, the Treasury staff is sure to be expanded. Treasury's Bureau of Federal Supply would have to hire several thousand additional employes to make purchases for foreign countries under the Marshall plan. A new war bond campaign is being talked of as an anti-inflation move—also new controls on foreign funds in this country—new jobs that would make for additional Treasury employes . . . The State Department had to take a big reduction in both budget and personnel from Congress last summer. Now Mr. Taher is threatening to cut the department again. But on the other hand, the department appears to stand a good chance to get all the employes back of it fired and more, too, if the Marshall Plan is approved and its overseas propaganda program is expanded. The department will soon ask for an appropriation that would add from 1500 to 2000 employes to its foreign news propaganda staff, mainly overseas. Now, let's take a look at Postoffice, the largest of the Government agencies. Postoffice has nearly half a million workers of all types. The Postoffice is in the business of carrying the mail, a billion-dollar business. And like any business, when business expands, it must either enlarge its staff, or else cut its services to the public. Right now postal business is at an all-time peacetime high—this year's business is expected to be the second best year in history, second only to the war year of 1944. As a result of budget cuts, the Postoffice Department is now reducing its services in many cities—it claims it doesn't have enough people to take care of all the work. It will hire tens of thousands of additional employes within the next month alone to take care of the Christmas mail rush. As the matter now stands, postal officials are now debating whether to ask for more money to hire additional people to provide better service—rather than requesting a budget cut. So, it now appears that any big cut in the Postoffice budget is rather remote . . . Now there's also talk on Capitol Hill that unification of the armed services should result in a sizable reduction of civilian employes for the Army, Navy and Air Forces. Well, the other day, Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall said that the three military services would continue to need 700,000 civilian employes for the immediate future. In other words, he doesn't see a chance for any sizable reduction of civilian employes because of the unsettled world condition. As a matter of fact, since Army and Navy enlistments are lagging, there is talk in military services of hiring additional thousands of civilians to replace soldiers and sailors in desk jobs. Furthermore, the Army is planning to use more and more civilians in the occupied areas instead of soldiers. So again, the outlook is for more instead of fewer Federal workers . . . That brings up the most costly Federal agency—the Veterans Administration. And budget and personnel cuts are being discussed for it, too. VA has about 200,000 employes and it will spend more than seven billion dollars this year. But even so, its officials say their agency doesn't have enough help to handle all the demands from the millions of veterans for service, particularly, in the insurance field. Veteran's organizations in Boston and other cities have sent petitions to Congress urging more employes for the VA offices.

Faith and Skill Join to Save Infant With Rare Ailment

The Washington Post

GOING STRONG—Mrs. Dorothy Thompson, 26, of 2224 Good Hope rd. se., at Homeopathic Hospital with infant daughter, Diane, who is now eight days past an unusual operation in which a break in her intestines was pieced together, and well on the mend. Diane was born November 18

Her mother's faith and the skill of doctors have given 10-day-old Diane Thompson a healthy lease on life after an unusual operation.

Diane is the first child of Dorothy Thompson, 26, and James Thompson, 31, of 2224 Good Hope rd. se. The Thompsons were married April 6, 1946.

Diane was born at Homeopathic Hospital, 2d and N sts. nw., on November 18.

Two days later Dr. Leon Gerber, of 4511 28th st. nw., operated on the infant for an unusual ailment which he said he could not name but could describe. The trouble was that a section of the small intestine was missing. He said the missing section was about three inches long. On either side of the divide, the intestine ended in a blind loop.

He said the operation consisted of joining the two ends and opening the necessary passageway.

For long hours running into days, Diane's life hung in the balance.

Doctors brought Mrs. Thompson discouraging reports. Throughout, Mrs. Thompson voiced strong belief that her baby would live.

Dr. Gerber spoke warmly yesterday of Mrs. Thompson's religious faith, and of her conviction that Diane would be all right.

"I prayed, and my family prayed, and I cried, but something just told me that she wasn't going to die," Mrs. Thompson said.

She said the baby was baptized by the Rev. Carter S. Gillis, pastor of her church, Christ Episcopal at 6th and G sts. se.

While the praying went on, Diane got a staggering variety of medical attention. She had a tube in her stomach. She received three blood transfusions. She was given oxygen, penicillin, streptomycin, salt solution, proteins and vitamin injections.

In the early hours of last Sunday, Diane passed the crisis, and doctors found the operation had been a success.

Mrs. Thompson said they are hoping to take their baby home next week.

The Thompsons—with their real thanksgiving day already past—celebrated yesterday with visits from relatives, including Mrs. Edna Coe, 5418 Blair rd. ne., a sister of Mrs. Thompson; Miss Minerva Naples, 813 Kentucky ave. se., a niece of Mrs. Thompson; and Mr. and Mrs. Alvin B. Bean, 3802 E. Capitol st., brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Thompson.

Mrs. Thompson is a native of Washington and a graduate of Eastern High School. Her husband was born near Charlotte Hall, Md., and served three of his five years in the Army overseas, taking part in the campaigns in North Africa, Sicily, Italy and Germany, as a corporal in the field artillery. He is employed now as a machinist with the Phelps-Roberts Machine and Welding Co., 2361 Sherman ave. nw.

Ten Injured In Assaults

It was no holiday for some Washingtonians yesterday. About 10 persons were injured in various types of assaults.

According to a police report, Herbert Hoover White of 107 D st. sw., shoved a revolver in the neck of Charles Matthews, 27, of 809 Delaware ave. sw., Wednesday, in the 200 block of B st. sw., and demanded payment of money he alleges Matthews owes him.

And, according to police, he finally fired two shots at Matthews' feet. Matthews was uninjured. White was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Hit With Bottle

Police also charged James Active Meadows, 39, of 749 Newton pl. nw., with assault with a dangerous weapon, claiming he walloped Donald Wilson, 24, of 5312 Foote st. ne., on the head with a bottle during an argument in the latter's home.

Wilson was treated at Gallinger Hospital for cuts on the right side of the head.

Truman Tarman, 46, of 1208 M st. nw., also was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. According to police, he struck Frank A. Foote, 42, of 713 H st. nw., on the head and hand with an alarm clock. Foote was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a fracture of the fifth finger on his right hand and scalp lacerations.

Charles T. Brooks, 40, of 2420 K st. nw., reported to police he was stabbed in the left eye by an unidentified youth Wednesday night in the unit block of Naylor ct. nw. Brooks was treated at Casualty.

Couple Held

Police charged a husband and wife both with assault with a dangerous weapon following a family argument. They are Carroll Johnson, 38, and his wife, Lila Mae, 34. Police said they struck one another with glass bottles in the kitchen of their home at 744 Howard rd. se.

Glenn Smith, 39, suffered a fractured nose and face lacerations when he was punched in his home at 728 22nd st. nw. He is at Gallinger Hospital. Police charged Horace E. Cooper, 21, of 1008 8th st. se., with assault.

Mack McCullough, 43, of 4837 3d st. nw, suffered lacerations of the face, scalp and left hand when he was struck by an unidentified person in the 1500 block of R st. nw. He is at Gallinger.

Lip Cut in Fight

James Ward, 46, was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for a cut of the lower lip received during a fight in his home, 1141 8th st. nw. Ward did not identify his assailant.

John H. Blythe, 48 of 826 4th st. nw., was struck by an unidentified man while walking through an alley near his home. He was treated for head lacerations at Freedmen's Hospital.

Viola Stevenson, 25, was treated at Garfield Hospital for second degree burns of the neck and both arms. Police said a pot of hot tea was thrown at her in her home, 37 Florida ave. ne., by another woman.

Holiday Toll Over Nation Reaches 57

By The Associated Press

Fifty-seven persons throughout the Nation lost their lives by violence over the Thanksgiving holiday—51 in traffic accidents.

Illinois, where snow and icy roads hampered traffic and stalled numerous motorists, and New York State, which also experienced snow, reported the greatest number of highway deaths with 10 each. Indiana was next with 7.

Other States reporting traffic deaths since 6 p. m. Wednesday night were West Virginia, 3; Ohio, Kansas, Oklahoma, Washington, California and Alabama, 2 each; Iowa, Maryland, New Jersey, North Carolina, Utah, Virginia, Kentucky, Wisconsin and Maine, 1 each.

Illinois and Maine each reported two violent deaths from miscellaneous causes and Pennsylvania and Alabama had one each.

Last year 83 persons met violent death during the Thanksgiving observance period, including 69 in motoring mishaps.

Exhaust Gas Kills Virginia Girl, Man

Car With Lights on Leads to Discovery Of Young Couple By Alexandrians

A Manasssas girl bank employe and a 23-year-old youth were found dead of carbon monoxide poisoning yesterday morning in a parked car near Brentville about 5 miles from Manassas in Prince William County, Va.

Police said the girl was Miss Mary Ida Wright, 20, of near Nokesville, Va., an employe of the People's National Bank of Manasses, and the youth was Paul Edward Lion, grandson of Tom Lion, a former Commonwealth's attorney for Prince William County.

State Trooper Phil P. Herndon said the deaths apparently were accidental, resulting either from a leaking gas heater or from the exhaust seeping into the car.

Herndon said the car, with windows closed, its lights on and the motor running, was noticed about 9 a. m. near the intersection of Routes 651 and 709 in Prince William County by two Alexandria men who were passing in a car.

The Alexandrians, he said, were Albert Randolph Neuman, jr., 707 Pendleton st., and John W. Padgett, 212 N. Fairfax st., a passenger in Neuman's car. They stopped, he said, to see what was wrong when they noticed the stopped car with its lights on at that time of day.

Coroner E. H. Marsteller of Prince William County issued a certificate of accidental death due to monoxide poisoning. He said the couple had left their homes Wednesday night to attend a movie. He estimated they had been dead for some time when found.

Miss Wright was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Wright of Aden, Va., near Nokesville. Lion, son of Mr. and Mrs. Comfort Lion of Manassas, was a mechanic in an Arlington garage.

Cigarette Deal Cost $100— And No Smoke

The theft of cigarette money—$100 worth—was one of the robberies reported to police yesterday.

Grant Gines of 1814 1st st. nw. told police he was parked in a truck Wednesday night with a girl he knows only by the name of Josephine.

He said he gave her a $100 bill to go get him cigarettes. He's still waiting for her to return.

Housebreakers Sought

In the Thirteenth Precinct, police were searching for housebreakers who pulled off a series of six jobs early yesterday.

One of the complaintants was Geva Miller of 1427½ W st. nw., who said she was awakened at about 4 a. m. by a man who was standing at the floor of her bed.

She said that although the man flashed a light in her face and warned her not to scream, she fled upstairs from her first-floor bedroom. She saw him escape from the house and leap over a back fence. Nothing was missing.

Nearby, at 1424 W st. nw., an intruder took a billfold containing $1.45 and a $5 watch from the dresser of John W. Mason, and ransacked the adjoining apartment of Leroy Jones, but took nothing.

Driven Off by Scream

In another series of apparently related housebreakings, Melba Jackson of 1954 2d st. nw., reported she was awakened early yesterday in her home by a burglar who pushed over a chair. He fled when she screamed.

Police believe it was the same prowler who broke into 2231 1st st. nw. and stole $10 from the bedroom of Virginia Slack and $3 from the bedroom of Margaret E. Taylor.

Thomas McCoy, manager of Alvin's Motors used car lot, 4427 Benning rd. ne., reported his office ransacked but nothing missing.

Arthur H. West of 2523 Georgia ave. nw., told police that at about 6:30 p. m. Wednesday in the unit block of L st. nw., a man behind hi masked him for a light, then struck him on the head and dragged him in the alley where he robbed him of $18.

Fur Coat Stolen

Ruth Burgess of 307 R st. nw., reported a $500 Persian lamb fur coat and a $300 mink scarf taken from her apartment.

Phillip Levine, proprietor of a drug store at 211 Upshur st. nw., said thieves tried to force the door of th estore with a pick ax. He said they may have been driven away by a burglar alarm.

Ann Reifsnider of 1480 Girard st. nw., reported a wallet containing $91 was stolen from her dresser Wednesday.

All Were Remembered on Turkey Feast Day

LEARNING YOUNG—Here's a scene during the children's Thanksgiving dinner at the Salvation Army Emergency Home, made possible, in large measure, by Community Chest support. Chest's Homes Unit Pledges To Meet Quota

Workers of the residential unit of the Community Chest Federation campaign have pledged themselves to raise their full quota of $537,000.

The unit reported pledges and contrbutions of $353,002, or more than 65 per cent of its quota, at the seventh report meeting of the 1948 drive held on Tuesday.

The promise to raise the balance of $184,498 "if humanly possible" was made yesterday by Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel, a vice chairman of the residential workers' group, who has taken over direction of the unit's work from Mrs. Angus Dunn, chairman. Mrs. Dunn's activities are curtailed by a broken wrist, but she continues to serve the drive by telephone.

Total Near 70 Per Cent

The Chest Federation campaign has reached nearly 70 per cent of its $3,900,000 goal, with a total of $2,717,318.81 reported Tuesday.

The 2400 volunteer workers of the residential unit include housewives and business and professional women. Their Community Chest Federation work consists of going from door to door in residential sections soliciting personal gifts for the Red Feather agencies.

One of their problems is the housewife whose breadwinner husband is contributing to the Chest Federation drive at his place of business. Campaign officials have explained that contributions are made on an individual basis, and each member of a family should be asked to donate to the cause, whether from a payroll or from a home food budget.

Another Report Tuesday

The next campaign report luncheon will be held at 12:15 p. m. Tuesday at the Hotel Burlington on a "Dutch treat" basis, with Campaign Chairman Edward H. Foley, jr., presiding. All 10 of the soliciting groups will report their progress.

The receiving center for residential unit collections will remain at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, while volunteers of the business units are asked to continue to bring contributions to the campaign headquarters at 1435 K st. nw.

Formation of a 100 percent club in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area campaign was announced yesterday by Mrs. Benjamin A. Powell, chairman of the unit. Mrs. Powell said four section chairmen and 26 captains on her team have qualified for membership.

Their efforts have placed Bethesda-Chevy Chase ahead of all other sections in Montgomery County, with $52,850.49 turned in, or about 84 per cent of the $63,000 goal for the unit.

Infant Child Dies of Burns In Alexandria

One-year-old Janice Louise Rider was fatally burned last night when the sofa on which she was lying in her Alexandria home became ignited from burning paper.

The child, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Rider, 129 N. Payne st., was taken to Alexandria Hospital where she died about four hours after being admitted.

The accident occurred about 5:30 p. m. while the child's mother was at a neighbor's house. The mother, Mrs. Myrtle Rider, said that she had added some wood to an indoors heater just before leaving the house.

Alone in the house were Janice Louise and her older sisters, Carolyn, 5, and Brenda May, 3. Mrs. Rider said that Brenda May attempted to put a newspaper into the heater and took it out when it blazed up, putting it on the sofa where the baby was lying.

On her return, Mrs. Rider said, she carried the two older grils from the smoke filled room before she realized that Janice Louise had been burned.

The father, a fireman at Episcopal High School, Alexandria, was at work, filling a double duty holiday shift.

Transfer Fails To Affect D. C. Food Board

Transfer of direction of the Nation-wide food saving campaign from the Citizen's Food Committee to the Agriculture Department will not affect the D. C. Citizen's Food Conservation Committee.

James E. Colliflower, director of the committee, said yesterday that the work of the local group will continue.

"In fact we must intensify our efforts now that cold weather is upon us and the needs overseas become greater," Colliflower said.

He reminded residents of the area that the over-all goal is to save 100 million bushels of grain.

"We in the District must do our share in attaining that end," Colliflower said.

He pointed to conclusions reached by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council at a meeting held here last week as ways of saving food.

At the meeting 24 food and nutrition scientists said that the substitution of small increases of potatoes, fruits and vegetables for meat and eggs in the American diet would make available as much as 200 million bushels of wheat and other cereals for shipment to Europe. This can be done without impairing the health or working

D. C. Marks Holiday by Eating 15% More Turkey

Chest Agencies Give Meals, Parties to Scores of Children And Homeless Men

By Frank Wilder
Post Reporter

Greater Washington had its fill of turkey yesterday and still had enough to spread tables for less fortunate folk here and abroad.

As hundreds of thousands sat down to the traditional Thanksgiving fare, Community Chest and other walfare agencies simulated home for countless numbers of underpriviledged.

Many of those who gave thanks at churches throughout the city and suburbs brought along food packages for shipment to Europe.

The weather was perfect—sunny most of the day and cold.

About 100,000 persons squeezed into trains, airplanes and buses to join families elsewhere.

Most Washingtonians spent the day in quiet enjoyment of the holiday at home. Other thousands filed through the Freedom Train at Union Station, cheered at football games or lined up for movie shows.

More than 100 homeless men dug into a real Thanksgiving feast at the Central Union Mission, 613 C st. nw.

Hundreds of children ate turkey and romped at parties in numerous Community Chest agencies. At the Children's Aid Society, 466 H st. se., more than 250 were fed in groups of 60 at a time.

A political truce for the day seemed to have been called by top congressional leaders. There was not a hint of politics in any of the day's statements. Many gave thanks for their American citizenship and for the right to live in a country free of tyranny.

Reports from leading retail food dealers showed Greater Washington residents had eaten an estimated 15 to 20 per cent more turkey this Thanksgiving than last.

School children were perhaps the happiest yesterday. They went to bed full of turkey and full of plans. There's no school until Monday.

Community Chest agencies will continue the holiday spirit tonight with a Thanksgiving dance from 8 to 11 p.m. at the Georgetown branch of the Boys' Club of Washington, 2726 M st. nw., and tomorrow night with a teen-agers dance at Christ Child Settlement House, 608 Massachusetts ave. ne.

Thanksgiving Brings Coldest Day of Season

Thanksgiving yesterday was Washington's coldest day of the season.

A low of 28 degrees was registered at the Weather Bureau at National Airport at 7:10 a. m., 4 degrees lower than the previous low of 32 on November 18.

Weebee

But, unlike the "Christmas weather" in the northern third of the country, the District's sunny though nippy weather fitted perfectly with turkey and pumpkin pie.

Similar weather, the District forecaster said, may be expected today, with the temperature ranging from about 34 this morning to 45 this afternoon.

White Thanksgivings were reported along a narrow strip from Pennsylvania along the Great Lakes to the Rockies. A 24-inch snow had nearly all traffic stalled in Erie, Pa., while International Falls, Minn., the Nation's coldest spot, had weather one below zero.

Tomorrow, the Weather Bureau said, is expected to be continued sunny and cold—probably a little colder than today as the chilly air over the Midwest moves eastward.

1½-Pound Baby Doing 'Very Well' In Incubator

The prematurely born baby, who weighed only 1½ pounds at birth last Friday, was "doing very well" yesterday at Doctors Hospital where it is being kept in an oxygen incubator.

The baby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Zimmerman, jr., 4713 N. Rock Spring rd., Arlington, was born at the home, with a nurse and a physician in attendance, and taken to the hospital 15 minutes later.

Dr. William Tenenblatt, an obstetrician, who delivered the baby, said it probably would have to remain for "a few months" in the incubator. Each day, he said, its chances to live improve.

The mother, 32, is wife of an assistant commissioner of the Office of Indian Affairs. The child, the mother said, is to be named Mary Eleanor.

The Federal Diary

Efficiency Rating System Changes To Be Announced

EFFICIENCY RATINGS: Changes in the efficiency rating system will be announced next week at the annual rating conference to be held in the Interior auditorium. They will be:

1. A provision that a supervisor "should" warn any employe whom he plans to rate unsatisfactory or fair; that the warning should be made 90 days in advance of the annual rating, and that the supervisor should tell the employe how he can improve his work and win a higher rating.

However, the warning will not be mandatory. It will be optional with the supervisor. As a practical matter, most supervisors will use the warning device. The new Civil Service regulations will say that the fact an employe wasn't warned must be taken into consideration when he appeals his fair or unsatisfactory rating.

2. Time-consuming and trouble-some special ratings will be ordered abolished. Hereafter, when an employe transfers to a new job, he'll automatically carry over his old rating for a six-month period. At the end of six months, he'll be given a regular rating and he'll be rated once a year thereafter. The only exception will be a transferred employe who has an unsatisfactory rating. His rating will be raised to fair.

3. A new provision will permit the mass of ratings to be made throughout the year instead of on March 31. It will allow annual ratings to be made on the anniversaries of entrance on duty on the change of jobs. The job of making ratings will be spread the year-over by this change.

A last-minute change by Civil Service knocked out the proposal for emergency ratings. It had been decided to allow Federal agencies to give "fair" or "unsatisfactory" ratings at any time to below-par employes. However, opposition from agencies caused the plan to be dropped.

Very few layoffs are in the works despite threats from Capitol Hill.

The Internal Revenue Bureau had to cut off about 6500 trained employes last July because of a 20 million-dollar budget cut forced by Taber's committee. Since that time, two congressional committees have been investigating the efficiency of the tax-collecting agency, the House Appropriations Committee and the Joint Congressional Committee on Taxation. I understand that the latter committee has a report which says, in effect, that the revenue bureau could collect a billion or so more money in taxes if it had enough employes for the additional work. Also, revenue officials claim they could have collected upward of 400 millions more in taxes this year if the 20-million budget cut hadn't been made. It's obvious that any attempt to make additional reductions in the revenue staff will meet with stiff opposition. In fact, I'm sure the President will ask Congress for money to expand the revenue staff by at least 5000 employes . . . The outlook for employes in Treasury proper appears equally good—and if the Marshall Plan is approved, the Treasury staff is sure to be expanded. Treasury's Bureau of Federal Supply would have to hire several thousand additional employes to make purchases for foreign countries under the Marshall plan. A new war bond campaign is being talked of as an anti-inflation move—also new controls on foreign funds in this country—new jobs that would make for additional Treasury employes . . . The State Department had to take a big reduction in both budget and personnel from Congress last summer. Now Mr. Taher is threatening to cut the department again. But on the other hand, the department appears to stand a good chance to get all the employes back of it fired and more, too, if the Marshall Plan is approved and its overseas propaganda program is expanded. The department will soon ask for an appropriation that would add from 1500 to 2000 employes to its foreign news propaganda staff, mainly overseas. Now, let's take a look at Postoffice, the largest of the Government agencies. Postoffice has nearly half a million workers of all types. The Postoffice is in the business of carrying the mail, a billion-dollar business. And like any business, when business expands, it must either enlarge its staff, or else cut its services to the public. Right now postal business is at an all-time peacetime high—this year's business is expected to be the second best year in history, second only to the war year of 1944. As a result of budget cuts, the Postoffice Department is now reducing its services in many cities—it claims it doesn't have enough people to take care of all the work. It will hire tens of thousands of additional employes within the next month alone to take care of the Christmas mail rush. As the matter now stands, postal officials are now debating whether to ask for more money to hire additional people to provide better service—rather than requesting a budget cut. So, it now appears that any big cut in the Postoffice budget is rather remote . . . Now there's also talk on Capitol Hill that unification of the armed services should result in a sizable reduction of civilian employes for the Army, Navy and Air Forces. Well, the other day, Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall said that the three military services would continue to need 700,000 civilian employes for the immediate future. In other words, he doesn't see a chance for any sizable reduction of civilian employes because of the unsettled world condition. As a matter of fact, since Army and Navy enlistments are lagging, there is talk in military services of hiring additional thousands of civilians to replace soldiers and sailors in desk jobs. Furthermore, the Army is planning to use more and more civilians in the occupied areas instead of soldiers. So again, the outlook is for more instead of fewer Federal workers . . . That brings up the most costly Federal agency—the Veterans Administration. And budget and personnel cuts are being discussed for it, too. VA has about 200,000 employes and it will spend more than seven billion dollars this year. But even so, its officials say their agency doesn't have enough help to handle all the demands from the millions of veterans for service, particularly, in the insurance field. Veteran's organizations in Boston and other cities have sent petitions to Congress urging more employes for the VA offices.

Faith and Skill Join to Save Infant With Rare Ailment

The Washington Post

GOING STRONG—Mrs. Dorothy Thompson, 26, of 2224 Good Hope rd. se., at Homeopathic Hospital with infant daughter, Diane, who is now eight days past an unusual operation in which a break in her intestines was pieced together, and well on the mend. Diane was born November 18

Her mother's faith and the skill of doctors have given 10-day-old Diane Thompson a healthy lease on life after an unusual operation.

Diane is the first child of Dorothy Thompson, 26, and James Thompson, 31, of 2224 Good Hope rd. se. The Thompsons were married April 6, 1946.

Diane was born at Homeopathic Hospital, 2d and N sts. nw., on November 18.

Two days later Dr. Leon Gerber, of 4511 28th st. nw., operated on the infant for an unusual ailment which he said he could not name but could describe. The trouble was that a section of the small intestine was missing. He said the missing section was about three inches long. On either side of the divide, the intestine ended in a blind loop.

He said the operation consisted of joining the two ends and opening the necessary passageway.

For long hours running into days, Diane's life hung in the balance.

Doctors brought Mrs. Thompson discouraging reports. Throughout, Mrs. Thompson voiced strong belief that her baby would live.

Dr. Gerber spoke warmly yesterday of Mrs. Thompson's religious faith, and of her conviction that Diane would be all right.

"I prayed, and my family prayed, and I cried, but something just told me that she wasn't going to die," Mrs. Thompson said.

She said the baby was baptized by the Rev. Carter S. Gillis, pastor of her church, Christ Episcopal at 6th and G sts. se.

While the praying went on, Diane got a staggering variety of medical attention. She had a tube in her stomach. She received three blood transfusions. She was given oxygen, penicillin, streptomycin, salt solution, proteins and vitamin injections.

In the early hours of last Sunday, Diane passed the crisis, and doctors found the operation had been a success.

Mrs. Thompson said they are hoping to take their baby home next week.

The Thompsons—with their real thanksgiving day already past—celebrated yesterday with visits from relatives, including Mrs. Edna Coe, 5418 Blair rd. ne., a sister of Mrs. Thompson; Miss Minerva Naples, 813 Kentucky ave. se., a niece of Mrs. Thompson; and Mr. and Mrs. Alvin B. Bean, 3802 E. Capitol st., brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Thompson.

Mrs. Thompson is a native of Washington and a graduate of Eastern High School. Her husband was born near Charlotte Hall, Md., and served three of his five years in the Army overseas, taking part in the campaigns in North Africa, Sicily, Italy and Germany, as a corporal in the field artillery. He is employed now as a machinist with the Phelps-Roberts Machine and Welding Co., 2361 Sherman ave. nw.

Ten Injured In Assaults

It was no holiday for some Washingtonians yesterday. About 10 persons were injured in various types of assaults.

According to a police report, Herbert Hoover White of 107 D st. sw., shoved a revolver in the neck of Charles Matthews, 27, of 809 Delaware ave. sw., Wednesday, in the 200 block of B st. sw., and demanded payment of money he alleges Matthews owes him.

And, according to police, he finally fired two shots at Matthews' feet. Matthews was uninjured. White was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Hit With Bottle

Police also charged James Active Meadows, 39, of 749 Newton pl. nw., with assault with a dangerous weapon, claiming he walloped Donald Wilson, 24, of 5312 Foote st. ne., on the head with a bottle during an argument in the latter's home.

Wilson was treated at Gallinger Hospital for cuts on the right side of the head.

Truman Tarman, 46, of 1208 M st. nw., also was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. According to police, he struck Frank A. Foote, 42, of 713 H st. nw., on the head and hand with an alarm clock. Foote was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a fracture of the fifth finger on his right hand and scalp lacerations.

Charles T. Brooks, 40, of 2420 K st. nw., reported to police he was stabbed in the left eye by an unidentified youth Wednesday night in the unit block of Naylor ct. nw. Brooks was treated at Casualty.

Couple Held

Police charged a husband and wife both with assault with a dangerous weapon following a family argument. They are Carroll Johnson, 38, and his wife, Lila Mae, 34. Police said they struck one another with glass bottles in the kitchen of their home at 744 Howard rd. se.

Glenn Smith, 39, suffered a fractured nose and face lacerations when he was punched in his home at 728 22nd st. nw. He is at Gallinger Hospital. Police charged Horace E. Cooper, 21, of 1008 8th st. se., with assault.

Mack McCullough, 43, of 4837 3d st. nw, suffered lacerations of the face, scalp and left hand when he was struck by an unidentified person in the 1500 block of R st. nw. He is at Gallinger.

Lip Cut in Fight

James Ward, 46, was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for a cut of the lower lip received during a fight in his home, 1141 8th st. nw. Ward did not identify his assailant.

John H. Blythe, 48 of 826 4th st. nw., was struck by an unidentified man while walking through an alley near his home. He was treated for head lacerations at Freedmen's Hospital.

Viola Stevenson, 25, was treated at Garfield Hospital for second degree burns of the neck and both arms. Police said a pot of hot tea was thrown at her in her home, 37 Florida ave. ne., by another woman.

Holiday Toll Over Nation Reaches 57

By The Associated Press

Fifty-seven persons throughout the Nation lost their lives by violence over the Thanksgiving holiday—51 in traffic accidents.

Illinois, where snow and icy roads hampered traffic and stalled numerous motorists, and New York State, which also experienced snow, reported the greatest number of highway deaths with 10 each. Indiana was next with 7.

Other States reporting traffic deaths since 6 p. m. Wednesday night were West Virginia, 3; Ohio, Kansas, Oklahoma, Washington, California and Alabama, 2 each; Iowa, Maryland, New Jersey, North Carolina, Utah, Virginia, Kentucky, Wisconsin and Maine, 1 each.

Illinois and Maine each reported two violent deaths from miscellaneous causes and Pennsylvania and Alabama had one each.

Last year 83 persons met violent death during the Thanksgiving observance period, including 69 in motoring mishaps.

Exhaust Gas Kills Virginia Girl, Man

Car With Lights on Leads to Discovery Of Young Couple By Alexandrians

A Manasssas girl bank employe and a 23-year-old youth were found dead of carbon monoxide poisoning yesterday morning in a parked car near Brentville about 5 miles from Manassas in Prince William County, Va.

Police said the girl was Miss Mary Ida Wright, 20, of near Nokesville, Va., an employe of the People's National Bank of Manasses, and the youth was Paul Edward Lion, grandson of Tom Lion, a former Commonwealth's attorney for Prince William County.

State Trooper Phil P. Herndon said the deaths apparently were accidental, resulting either from a leaking gas heater or from the exhaust seeping into the car.

Herndon said the car, with windows closed, its lights on and the motor running, was noticed about 9 a. m. near the intersection of Routes 651 and 709 in Prince William County by two Alexandria men who were passing in a car.

The Alexandrians, he said, were Albert Randolph Neuman, jr., 707 Pendleton st., and John W. Padgett, 212 N. Fairfax st., a passenger in Neuman's car. They stopped, he said, to see what was wrong when they noticed the stopped car with its lights on at that time of day.

Coroner E. H. Marsteller of Prince William County issued a certificate of accidental death due to monoxide poisoning. He said the couple had left their homes Wednesday night to attend a movie. He estimated they had been dead for some time when found.

Miss Wright was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Wright of Aden, Va., near Nokesville. Lion, son of Mr. and Mrs. Comfort Lion of Manassas, was a mechanic in an Arlington garage.

Cigarette Deal Cost $100— And No Smoke

The theft of cigarette money—$100 worth—was one of the robberies reported to police yesterday.

Grant Gines of 1814 1st st. nw. told police he was parked in a truck Wednesday night with a girl he knows only by the name of Josephine.

He said he gave her a $100 bill to go get him cigarettes. He's still waiting for her to return.

Housebreakers Sought

In the Thirteenth Precinct, police were searching for housebreakers who pulled off a series of six jobs early yesterday.

One of the complaintants was Geva Miller of 1427½ W st. nw., who said she was awakened at about 4 a. m. by a man who was standing at the floor of her bed.

She said that although the man flashed a light in her face and warned her not to scream, she fled upstairs from her first-floor bedroom. She saw him escape from the house and leap over a back fence. Nothing was missing.

Nearby, at 1424 W st. nw., an intruder took a billfold containing $1.45 and a $5 watch from the dresser of John W. Mason, and ransacked the adjoining apartment of Leroy Jones, but took nothing.

Driven Off by Scream

In another series of apparently related housebreakings, Melba Jackson of 1954 2d st. nw., reported she was awakened early yesterday in her home by a burglar who pushed over a chair. He fled when she screamed.

Police believe it was the same prowler who broke into 2231 1st st. nw. and stole $10 from the bedroom of Virginia Slack and $3 from the bedroom of Margaret E. Taylor.

Thomas McCoy, manager of Alvin's Motors used car lot, 4427 Benning rd. ne., reported his office ransacked but nothing missing.

Arthur H. West of 2523 Georgia ave. nw., told police that at about 6:30 p. m. Wednesday in the unit block of L st. nw., a man behind hi masked him for a light, then struck him on the head and dragged him in the alley where he robbed him of $18.

Fur Coat Stolen

Ruth Burgess of 307 R st. nw., reported a $500 Persian lamb fur coat and a $300 mink scarf taken from her apartment.

Phillip Levine, proprietor of a drug store at 211 Upshur st. nw., said thieves tried to force the door of th estore with a pick ax. He said they may have been driven away by a burglar alarm.

Ann Reifsmider of 1480 Girard st. nw., reported a wallet containing $91 was stolen from her dresser Wednesday.

All Were Remembered on Turkey Feast Day

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

Chest's Homes Unit Pledges To Meet Quota

Workers of the residential unit of the Community Chest Federation campaign have pledged themselves to raise their full quota of $537,000.

The unit reported pledges and contrbutions of $353,002, or more than 65 per cent of its quota, at the seventh report meeting of the 1948 drive held on Tuesday.

The promise to raise the balance of $184,498 "if humanly possible" was made yesterday by Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel, a vice chairman of the residential workers' group, who has taken over direction of the unit's work from Mrs. Angus Dunn, chairman. Mrs. Dunn's activities are curtailed by a broken wrist, but she continues to serve the drive by telephone.

Total Near 70 Per Cent

The Chest Federation campaign has reached nearly 70 per cent of its $3,900,000 goal, with a total of $2,717,318.81 reported Tuesday.

The 2400 volunteer workers of the residential unit include housewives and business and professional women. Their Community Chest Federation work consists of going from door to door in residential sections soliciting personal gifts for the Red Feather agencies.

One of their problems is the housewife whose breadwinner husband is contributing to the Chest Federation drive at his place of business. Campaign officials have explained that contributions are made on an individual basis, and each member of a family should be asked to donate to the cause, whether from a payroll or from a home food budget.

Another Report Tuesday

The next campaign report luncheon will be held at 12:15 p. m. Tuesday at the Hotel Burlington on a "Dutch treat" basis, with Campaign Chairman Edward H. Foley, jr., presiding. All 10 of the soliciting groups will report their progress.

The receiving center for residential unit collections will remain at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, while volunteers of the business units are asked to continue to bring contributions to the campaign headquarters at 1435 K st. nw.

Formation of a 100 percent club in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area campaign was announced yesterday by Mrs. Benjamin A. Powell, chairman of the unit. Mrs. Powell said four section chairmen and 26 captains on her team have qualified for membership.

Their efforts have placed Bethesda-Chevy Chase ahead of all other sections in Montgomery County, with $52,850.49 turned in, or about 84 per cent of the $63,000 goal for the unit.

Infant Child Dies of Burns In Alexandria

One-year-old Janice Louise Rider was fatally burned last night when the sofa on which she was lying in her Alexandria home became ignited from burning paper.

The child, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Rider, 129 N. Payne st., was taken to Alexandria Hospital where she died about four hours after being admitted.

The accident occurred about 5:30 p. m. while the child's mother was at a neighbor's house. The mother, Mrs. Myrtle Rider, said that she had added some wood to an indoors heater just before leaving the house.

Alone in the house were Janice Louise and her older sisters, Carolyn, 5, and Brenda May, 3. Mrs. Rider said that Brenda May attempted to put a newspaper into the heater and took it out when it blazed up, putting it on the sofa where the baby was lying.

On her return, Mrs. Rider said, she carried the two older grils from the smoke filled room before she realized that Janice Louise had been burned.

The father, a fireman at Episcopal High School, Alexandria, was at work, filling a double duty holiday shift.

Transfer Fails To Affect D. C. Food Board

Transfer of direction of the Nation-wide food saving campaign from the Citizen's Food Committee to the Agriculture Department will not affect the D. C. Citizen's Food Conservation Committee.

James E. Colliflower, director of the committee, said yesterday that the work of the local group will continue.

"In fact we must intensify our efforts now that cold weather is upon us and the needs overseas become greater," Colliflower said.

He reminded residents of the area that the over-all goal is to save 100 million bushels of grain.

"We in the District must do our share in attaining that end," Colliflower said.

He pointed to conclusions reached by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council at a meeting held here last week as ways of saving food.

At the meeting 24 food and nutrition scientists said that the substitution of small increases of potatoes, fruits and vegetables for meat and eggs in the American diet would make available as much as 200 million bushels of wheat and other cereals for shipment to Europe. This can be done without impairing the health or working efficiency of the American family, board members said.

Ways of increasing community interest in the food campaign will be discussed by local food officials with members of the Cabinet Food Committee and representatives of Citizens' Food Advisory Committee Tuesday at 10 a. m. in the Department of Agriculture Auditorium.

D. C. Marks Holiday by Eating 15% More Turkey

By Frank Wilder
Post Reporter

Greater Washington had its fill of turkey yesterday and still had enough to spread tables for less fortunate folk here and abroad.

As hundreds of thousands sat down to the traditional Thanksgiving fare, Community Chest and other welfare agencies simulated home for countless numbers of underpriviledged.

Many of those who gave thanks at churches throughout the city and suburbs brought along food packages for shipment to Europe.

The weather was perfect—sunny most of the day and cold.

About 100,000 persons squeezed into trains, airplanes and buses to join families elsewhere.

Most Washingtonians spent the day in quiet enjoyment of the holiday at home. Other thousands filed through the Freedom Train at Union Station, cheered at football games or lined up for movie shows.

More than 100 homeless men dug into a real Thanksgiving feast at the Central Union Mission, 613 C st. nw.

Hundreds of children ate turkey and romped at parties in numerous Community Chest agencies. At the Children's Aid Society, 466 H st. se., more than 250 were fed in groups of 60 at a time.

A political truce for the day seemed to have been called by top congressional leaders. There was not a hint of politics in any of the day's statements. Many gave thanks for their American citizenship and for the right to live in a country free of tyranny.

Reports from leading retail food dealers showed Greater Washington residents had eaten an estimated 15 to 20 per cent more turkey this Thanksgiving than last.

School children were perhaps the happiest yesterday. They went to bed full of turkey and full of plans. There's no school until Monday.

Community Chest agencies will continue the holiday spirit tonight with a Thanksgiving dance from 8 to 11 p.m. at the Georgetown branch of the Boys' Club of Washington, 2726 M st. nw., and tomorrow night with a teen-agers dance at Christ Child Settlement House, 608 Massachusetts ave. ne.

Thanksgiving Brings Coldest Day of Season

Thanksgiving yesterday was Washington's coldest day of the season.

A low of 28 degrees was registered at the Weather Bureau at National Airport at 7:10 a. m., 4 degrees lower than the previous low of 32 on November 18.

Weebee

But, unlike the "Christmas weather" in the northern third of the country, the District's sunny though nippy weather fitted perfectly with turkey and pumpkin pie.

Similar weather, the District forecaster said, may be expected today, with the temperature ranging from about 34 this morning to 45 this afternoon.

White Thanksgivings were reported along a narrow strip from Pennsylvania along the Great Lakes to the Rockies. A 24-inch snow had nearly all traffic stalled in Erie, Pa., while International Falls, Minn., the Nation's coldest spot, had weather one below zero.

Tomorrow, the Weather Bureau said, is expected to be continued sunny and cold—probably a little colder than today as the chilly air over the Midwest moves eastward.

1½-Pound Baby Doing 'Very Well' In Incubator

The prematurely born baby, who weighed only 1½ pounds at birth last Friday, was "doing very well" yesterday at Doctors Hospital where it is being kept in an oxygen incubator.

The baby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Zimmerman, jr., 4713 N. Rock Spring rd., Arlington, was born at the home, with a nurse and a physician in attendance, and taken to the hospital 15 minutes later.

Dr. William Tenenblatt, an obstetrician, who delivered the baby, said it probably would have to remain for "a few months" in the incubator. Each day, he said, its chances to live improve.

The mother, 32, is wife of an assistant commissioner of the Office of Indian Affairs. The child, the mother said, is to be named Mary Eleanor.

Store Sales During October Gain 4 Pct. Over Last Year

Richmond, Va., Nov. 27 (AP).—Department store sales in dollar volume in the Fifth Federal Reserve District—covering 86 stores in 5 States and the District of Columbia—were 4 per cent higher in October than during the same month in 1946, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported today. Sales for the first 10 months of the year in the same stores rose 3 per cent over the corresponding period last year.

Four department stores in Richmond showed the largest increase during the month—17 per cent—and a 9 per cent jump for the 10-month period over the preceding year's first 10 months. No changes were reported by 10 Baltimore stores for October and a 2 per cent increase for the first 10 months. Twenty department stores in Virginia reported a 12 per cent dollar sales rise for October over October 1946, and a 6 per cent jump for the 10-month period over the same period last year.

Broiler Co-ops To Hear Pool Plan

Salisbury, Md., Nov. 25 (AP).—Members of four Eastern Shore Broiler Cooperatives will discuss a plan to pool their flocks for market at a meeting December 1 in the Salisbury State Teachers College.

The proposed plan calls for each grower to dress and record his own birds. The cooperatives will make an advance payment when the birds are picked up from the farms and placed in one marketing pool. Additional payments then will be made to the growers from the actual returns of sales.

The plan will be explained by Dr. Raymond W. Miller of Washington, president of the American Institute of Cooperation.

INNOVATIONS IN RAINBOW. There'll be a new design for diversion in the Rainbow Room beginning tonight. The afternoon cocktail hour will be enlivened by a trio with the accent on Addie Lawyer's Selectraharp. No tax, no dancing at this session . . . Milton Davis' band will strike up for dancing at 8:30 for an evening of continuous music lasting until 1:30. Interludes will be played by the trio and there'll also be electraharp solos, songs by Sherry Sherwood . . . Artfully planned lighting has worked a minor miracle in the Rainbow Room, creating cozy corners and alluring highlights. Even the rainbow over the bandstand has been shined up . . . Manager Tom Kelley of the Hamilton Hotel is planning to bring some upper-bracket imported talent to Rainbow in a few weeks.

Carl Schubmann
Of the Washington Hotel

The Balalaika's new "Caucasian Revue" will open on Monday, feature racy skits and the noted Russian dagger dancer, Tavaceff, fresh from a concert tour that took him all over the country.

MURAL ROOM REOPENS. The Washington Hotel will reopen its Mural Room, closed for two long years, next Monday. Sparkling in pink, white and gold elegance, the Mural Room will make a strong appeal to Washington's dining-out public. In charge of both this room and the Washington Coffee Shop will be the hotel's new catering manager, Ernest Schubmann, who has been associated with world-famous hotels in Switzerland, France and England. In this country he has occupied executive posts at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York and the Mayflower, Carlton and Statler in Washington.

SAD! SAD! Pity the poor banker who recently tossed a dinner party on meatless Tuesday at Olmsted's. All that each guest had was a dozen oysters Rockefeller (big ones) and a 2-pound lobster. And that satisfied feeling.

Marijo (Jan) Biondi is the new singer with Johnny Robb's Madrillon band, replacing Jody Miller who's now on WNBW television . . . Kathie Milroy, secretary of Lounge Riviera's Bob Knight, may blossom out as a band singer. She has a nice voice, has been practicing diligently.

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S EVE planning has already been completed by the forward-looking Casino Royal management. An over-size revue with a New York dancing line will be unveiled on December 23 exactly in time for pre-Christmas revels . . . Danny Sullivan, singing emcee, will take off for the South after New Year's Eve, be replaced by—guess who? —Bob Preble, who was a fixture at the spot for years.

ABOUT THE STARS. Marge and Gower Champion, now appearing in the Mayflower Lounge, are newlyweds. They were married only two months ago, honeymooned at New York's Plaza . . . Bert Wheeler, star at the Cairo, was discovered by the late Gus Edwards as a kid singing and clowning on the streets of Paterson, N. J. . . . First radio sponsor of Tony Roberts, now singing at the Old New Orleans, was I. J. Fox, the gent who sells all those furs . . . Dona Mason of the King Cole Room (who's ready for big booking) is being amusing with a trifle called, "I'm Still Sitting Under the Apple Tree."

Television is the next thing to the hot place said Bill Hunnicutt when he dropped into the Fiesta to listen to Mal McIntyre's band. Seems that El Hunnicutt's television room averages 120 degrees. He's hoping the inventors of "cold light" will come to his rescue.

REQUEST PHILOSOPHY. "There are three kinds of requests," said Merry-Land's organist, Nate Shanks. "There's the bonafide request when the person really wants to hear a number, there's the request that's obviously an attempt to stump the musician. And there's that everlasting request for "Clair de Lune." I often suspect that it's the only classic number known by its requesters." Sophisticated Nate added, "When people tell me they like only classic music, I know they don't really like music at all. Real music lovers who fully appreciate the classics, also enjoy folk songs, light opera and the better tunes of the day."

DINNER TIME TIPS. Those ambrosian steaks at the Silver Fox are sure enough, no foolin', broiled over glowing hickory embers . . . The ultimate in chow mein is the Cantonese variety made with chicken that they serve at the Good Earth . . . The special antipasto at Ciro's is so rich and varied that it seems enough for a full meal. But the real gourmets think of it as the perfect prelude to veal scallopini . . . Rare and exotic items teem on the Ruby Foo's menu. Among the finest is Bok Ap—squab Chinese style to you. A tempting appetizer is Yok Yon—breaded and barbecued meat balls in pungent sauce with pineapple . . . Pies and pastries at the Neptune Room are all made on the premises and are uniformly wonderful. Try their hazelnut pie.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

FRANK LEAHY, the Notre Dame coach, has come up with the most sensible suggestion yet offered in the midst of football's silly season—the craze for naming All-America teams.

If the experts insist on naming All-America teams, says Leahy, then in these days of offensive and defensive specialists they ought to name two teams, one to represent the tops in offensive skill, the other typifying the best in defense.

POVICH

It's rare, he points out, when one man can qualify on both teams. He is fortunate to have in Johnny Lujack such a guy, who in addition to being perhaps the best quarterback in the colleges, is also rated Notre Dame's finest defensive player.

In these days of free substitutions, the headline stars see little service on defense. Not only do the coaches like to safeguard them from injury, but in most cases they have on the bench men who have more ability on defense than the fellows who have been making the headlines.

A COUPLE OF WEEKS ago, I saw the New York Yankees of the All-America Conference playing the Los Angeles Dons, and the Yankees were on defense. The Yankees' backfield stars were well known—Spec Sanders, Buddy Young, Eddie Prokop—but none of them were in the lineup when Los Angeles had the ball. In the secondary defense of the Yankees were four guys you never heard of—yet in Coach Ray Flaherty's view they were his best defensive backfield.

But it's hopeless for even a superdefensive star to make an All-American team unless he is also a ball-carrying or passing back, under the present system. The secondary defense are the unsung guys of football, except in the rare cases like Lujack, or Doc Blanchard of Army last season, or Tony Minisi of Penn. They were offensive stars as well.

At best the attempts to select the 11 best college football players in the United States as an All-American team are absurd, because nobody can eyewitness all of the candidates. But naming the best defensive and offensive teams would have the saving virtue of being only half ridiculous.

IT'S THE FASHION now, not only to name All-America elevens, but All-Italian, All-Polish, All-Catholic and All-Tongue Twisting teams. Even when it is narrowed down to those categories, the selections can be nonsensical, too. A few years ago, Tommy Harmon made virtually every All-American, yet he was left off the All-Catholic team to his complete wonderment.

Anyway, the business of All-American selections has resolved itself into a race among college press agents to get the best and the most notices for their favorite sons. They bombard the sports editors with telegrams and glowing notices about their heroes and even tell little white lies over the public address system to give their candidate undeserved credit when another player has made a tackle or fallen on a fumble.

Their technique is to lay off the positions already claimed by the overwhelming fame of stars of other schools, and hunt around for a guard, tackle or end job that may be open. Then they produce their own candidate and set up a publicity campaign on his behalf and, indirectly, their own. The college press agent who can produce an All-American, can hang onto his job.

SO MUCH FOR the college press agents. The so-called experts who comprise the committees and boards that finally select the All-Americans and do it unblushingly for some reason, aren't kidding anybody.

Lest they be accused of favoring one section of the Nation too much, it's the fashion of the experts to make their All-American teams representative of all sections. There must be at least one Ivy League player, one from Notre Dame, the Big Nine, the South, the Southwest, and the Pacific Coast. The little schools have no chance. They're not really picking All-Americans, they're distributing patronage.

Anyway, it's no overwhelming honor to be selected as an All-American player. To the contrary, there are so many AA teams selected these days it's rather an aspersion on the player who doesn't make somebody's All-American. They ought to shove the whole business down the drain.

Texas Accepts Sugar Bowl Invitation to Meet Alabama

New Orleans, Nov. 27 (AP).—The University of Texas accepted an invitation to meet Alabama in the 1948 Sugar Bowl game, just after the southwestern powerhouse trounced Texas A. & M. 32 to 13 today.

Thus, the New Year's Day sports classic in New Orleans will bring together two of the outstanding teams in the Southwestern and Southeastern Conferences.

Sam Corenswet, president of the Sugar Bowl, announced late today that Dana X. Bible, Texas University athletic director, had advised of the Longhorns' acceptance.

Alabama's acceptance was announced last Saturday.

The Texas "T" formation team finished its season today with its ninth victory in 10 games. Texas lost only to Southern Methodist University, and then by a one-point margin of 13 to 14.

Alabama wsa humbled early in the season by Tulane and Vanderbilt, but won its next six games in succession, and finishes its season tomorrow night with Miami.

The Texans, coached by Blair Cherry, have been rated among the Nation's first five teams throughout the current season.

The Longhorns are led by Bobby Layne, All-Southwest Conference halfback and a leading candidate for All-America honors.

Matching Layne is the great Harry Gilmer, Alabama spearhead who is appearing for his second time in four years in the Sugar Bowl.

"The Sugar Bowl has secured two high-scoring football teams in Texas and Alabama, and we look forward to another thrilling game," Corenswet said.

Di Mag Voted Top Player, BeatsOut Ted

By Joe Reichler

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio, star centerfielder of the World Champion New York Yankees, today won the American League's most valuable player award for 1947, by the narrowest possible margin, one slim vote, over Ted Williams, the circuit's batting king.

DiMaggio, who previously had earned the most valuable honors in 1939 and 1941, compiled a total of 202 votes to 201 for the Red Sox slugging outfielder in the vote of the 24-man committee of the Baseball Writers' Association of America for the Kenesaw Mountain Landis memorial award.

The balloting for third place also was decided by one point, with Lou Boudreau, shortstop-manager of the Cleveland Indians nosing out Joe Page, left-handed relief pitcher of the Yankees, 168 votes to 167.

George Kell Fifth

George Kell, Detroit's fine third baseman, finished fifth with 132 points, and George McQuinn, Cinderella Yankee first baseman, was sixth with 77 points. Seventh and eighth places went to the Indians' Joe Gordon and Bob Feller, respectively.

Gordon, whose splendid work both at bat and in the field following his acquisition from the Yankees, was largely responsible for the Tribe's first division finish, accumulated 59 points, one more than Feller, the league's strikeout king and only 20-game winner, received.

Pitcher Phil Marchildon, 19-game winner of the Philadelphia Athletics, was nintr with 47 votes and Luke Appling, ageless shortstop of the Chicago White Sox, was tenth with 43.

Joe Three-Time Winner

In gaining his one-point margin over Williams in the closest race yet since the present system of voting was introduce in 1938, DiMaggio joined Jimmy Foxx, former Red Sox and Athletics slugger, as the only three-time winners of the MVP award.

He is the fifth Yankee player to be so honored, Babe Ruth winning the award in 1923, Lou Gehrig in 1927 and 1936, Joe Gordon in 1942 and Spud Chandler in 1943 in addition to DiMag in 1939 and 1941.

The Yankee Clipper topped the field in first-place votes, being named on top in eight ballots. Page was No. 1 man on seven ballots. Williams and McKuinn each drew three first-place votes and Eddie Joost led on two ballots. Joost, clutch-hitting shortstop of the A's, landed in eleventh place with 35 votes. Boudreau was named No. 1 man on one ballot.

DiMag Surmounts Obstacles

DiMaggio wound up the regular season with a .315 batting average, 28 points below Williams' league-leading .343, and drove in 97 runs on 168 hits, including 20 home runs.

In each of these departments he trailed Williams, who annexed the triple crown by copping the runs batted in and home runs leadership in addition to the bat title. Ted knocked in 114 runs and slammed 32 out of the park.

It was DiMaggio's great team play and courageous work under extreme adverse conditions that caused the writers to lean toward him.

The great star, who celebrated his thirty-third birthday last Tuesday, who underwent a heel operation during the winter, entered the lineup when things weren't going so well for the Yankees, despite the fact his injured heel had not fully recovered.

Played With Ailing Arm

His presence in the lineup, not to mention his big bat and fine work in the field, helped brace the entire club and started the Yanks on the victory trail.

It was not until after the season ended that it was learned that the courageous athlete had been bothered by an ailing throwing arm that caused him extreme pain whenever he was forced to make a hurried throw in an attempt to head off a base-runner.

He recently underwent an operation for the removal of a growth on his right elbow.

It marked the second time that DiMag had won in a close race with Williams for the MVP honor. The Yankee slugger bested Runnerup Ted in 1941, 291 to 254.

Unbeaten Teams Play for Interhigh Title Before 20,000; Rivalry Dates Back to '02

Proceeds of Attraction at Ball Park Will Go To Schools' Athletic Funds, Community Chest

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

High school football moves into the big league setting of Griffith Stadium tonight at 8:30 with undefeated McKinley Tech and Central renewing their 45-year-old rivalry for the 1947 Interhigh championship, before more than 20,000 fans.

Proceeds of this year's game, the second to be cosponsored by the Board of Education and The Washington Post, will go to the athletic funds of the eight public schools and the Community Chest.

Last year's game, in which Coolidge defeated Tech, 18-6, drew approximately 19,000 spectators, the largest crowd ever to see a schoolboy contest in Washington. The game contributed about $20,000 to the Children's Hospital.

Tonight's program will be a big-time attraction in every way. The Quantico, Va., Marine Base Drum and Bugle Corps, and the pep bands of McKinley and Central will provide plenty of high-stepping football music. Cheer leaders of both schools will be out in full force to lead the organized student cheers.

A half time contest of girl baton twirlers, representing all eight of the public highs will add an appropriate feminine touch.

The game itself stands on its merits. The favored Trainers of Tech have vaulted over six other Interhigh opponents. They have the distinction of being the only team in Interhigh history to go through a six-game league slate with an unscored-on record.

The Vikings of Central likewise have disposed of its league foes without tasting defeat. Their stellar forwards held three of their opponents, Calvin Coolidge, Roosevelt and Anacostia, scoreless. Their other three foes managed to total 25 points against the Viking reserves.

Central uses a blend of T and single-wing offense that mixes power with deception. The clash of the two styles is expected to produce a wide-open high scoring thriller.

Alumni of both schools have come into town from the nearby Washington high schools what traditional game that is to the states to see this big rivival of the Army-Navy and Yale-Harvard are to the colleges.

Central and Tech first began their gridiron rivalry in 1902, a year after the two schools split up from the original Washington High School. Since then, they have played 46 times. Central has 20 wins to 19 for Tech. Seven games resulted in ties.

Until 10 years ago, the winner of the Central-Tech game usually wound up the interhigh champion. And even though Tech hasn't won a championship since 1936 and Central hasn't won since 1942, Central has captured the flag 37 of the 44 years since the interhigh league was organized.

The 1947 version of Central vs. Tech will unveil many a new star to rank with those who, in past years, made the jump into college and professional football.

Tech has in Halfback Robert (Bugs) Thompson a fleet-footed prospect who may become another Glenn Davis. The Trainers will also let loose line-bucking Fullback Cecil Gray, and southpaw passing artist, Billy Werber 3d, whose dad made baseball history at Tech, and later rose to stardom with the Athletics, Red Sox, Yankees and Reds.

The Trainer line that has made interhigh history with its six shutouts boasts beef and speed. Pacemakers are 200-pound tackles Phil (Buck) Bernstein and Julius Poms, 190-pound All-High Center Bob Bell, and Guards Ed Cleary and Vern Moorer. In Glenn Smith, the Trainers have a good defensive end, and in Jim McCauley perhaps the most versatile flankman in the high schools today.

The Vikings' big backfield threat is 135-pound sophomore speedster Jimmy Pantos, who also does the passing. Young Pantos will get running and passing help from Halfback Ross Keith, a junior. Fullback Dale Leathery is the heavy-duty man.

The strapping Central line also boasts its share of all-high material. Leading the way are 227-pound Tackle Bob Douglas, heaviest man on either team, and 180-pound Guard Bob Petrillo, who doubles as president of the February graduating class.

Offensive standout on the Viking line is 6-foot 3-inch End Hal Sponsler, a sure-fire pass receiver. Other stars are Center Gene Million, who at 165 pounds, is the lightest lineman of either squad; 210-pound Tackle Fotis Karousators and stocky Guard Ed Cadeaux.

Bears Rout Detroit, 34-14

Detroit, Nov. 27 (AP).—The riproaring Chicago Bears, running a red-hot winning streak to eight games in a row, used long runs and long passes to set up all five of their touchdowns today as they whipped the Detroit Lions, 34 to 14, in a National Football League game before 29,446 fans.

The win gave the Bears undisputed leadership of the league's Western Division.

Sid Luckman, who completed 13 of 23 passes for 198 yards in gains, pitched only once for a touchdown, his 32-yard toss to End Ken Kavanaugh bringing the first Bear score just three seconds before the end of the first period.

Before the Bears relaxed, the score was 34-0. Luckman's 32-yard pass to Joe Osmanski put the ball in position for George Gulyanics to bull across from the 3-yard line in the second period.

Luckman's 36-yard pass to George McAfee put the Bears on the Detroit 1-yard line early in the second half and McAfee charged across on the next play. McAfee's 39-yard gallop set up Hugh Gallarneau's 3-yard plunge for the Bears' fourth touchdown and Gulyanic's 55-yard pass to Kavanaugh laid the groundwork for Gulyanic's 4-yard smash for the last Bear score.

Ray McLean converted after four of the five Chicago touchdowns and the fifth one was blocked.

Colonials Finally Win One, 40 to 0

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

After a fruitless search all season, George Washington finally found that elusive victory yesterday at Griffith Stadium, routing Kings Point, 40-0.

Pity of it was that fewer than 4000 chilled spectators were on hand to watch the Colonials triumph after eight unsuccessful attempts.

The weary Kings Point squad wasn't sorry the season ended, either. Coach Bill Reinhart's Merchant Mariners scored just two victories in their ambitious 11-game schedule.

George Washington's victory wasn't totally unexpected. The Colonials had the novel experience of going into the game a two-touchdown favorite. They made that many in the first quarter.

This undoubtedly was an exhilarating experience for GW footballers and they went on to score twice more in each of the next two quarters: Finally, feeling that a 40-point lead was safe enough, Coach Skip Stahley employed reserves on a wholesale basis and the last period was scoreless.

The Colonials' six touchdowns were divided among six individuals but Back Frank Cavallo exceeded his quota by adding four extra points from placement. Cavallo also had a hand in the last six-pointer when he threw a 22-yard pass to End Charles Gunner.

Al Dugoff went for the first touchdown after 6 minutes and 25 seconds. He took a handoff from Joe Wapinsky and skirted end for 23 yards without a hand being laid on him.

Late in the period, after a holding penalty pushed GW back to Kings Point's 31, Jim Kline crashed off tackle and raced through the secondary for the second score.

Charley Butler set up the next one when he took a second-period punt on the visitors 47 and ran 24 yards. Butler ran in circles, dazzling Kings Point, before he straightened out and went in the right direction. Pete Lubukas did the honors finally, going over from the 4 in two tries.

After Jim Kline got away for 36 yards to the 5, Cavallo fought the way over to give GW a 27-0 halftime advantage.

Freshman Pete Cordelli came on the scene in the third quarter and successfully directed a T-formation drive. Cordelli found End Merle Leisher with two passes to gain most of the ground and Paul Skinner plunged over from the 1-foot line.

Kings Point promptly handed the Colonials their last scoring chance. On the following kickoff, the Mariners were penalized to the 7 for clipping. Bruce Smith then fumbled and Capt. Carl Butkus pounced on the ball on the 9.

Jim Kline was thrown for a loss

Browns Beat Dons, 27 to 17

Los Angeles, Nov. 27 (AP).—Quarterback Otto Graham and the Cleveland Browns, avenging their only defeat of the 1947 All-America Football Conference campaign, packed too many explosives for Los Angeles today and whipped the Dons 27-17 before 45,009 fans in Memorial Coliseum.

Scoring a touchdown in each quarter, the Clevelanders overcame a 10-0 lead built up by Los Angeles in the first period, and went on to hand the locals their seventh defeat against six wins.

The Dons' place-kicking specialist, Ben Agapanian, got his mates off to a 3-point lead with a 43-yard field goal.

The Dons made it 10-0 when Harry Clarke scored from the 8-yard line after one of Graham's passes had been intercepted by Bill Reinhard on the Browns' 31.

Then Cleveland went to work. Graham passed to Mac Speedie for 32 yards and got across the midfield stripe. Then Marion Motley broke loose for 43 yards and the first Brown touchdown.

Automatic Otto threw two touchdown strikes, one for 18 yards to Reserve Halfback Tom Colella, the next one, on the first play after scrimmage as the second half began, good for 69 yards to Mickey Mayne. Mayne caught the long toss around the Dons' 35 and travelled on unmolested.

The last Cleveland touchdown was a gift. Chuck Fenenbock tried a laterial inside his own 10, Speedie snapped it out of the air and stepped on across the chalk line. Lou Saban place kicked three conversions, missing one.

Stahley Undecided

After yesterday's game, George Washington Coach Skip Stahley said he had no statement to make concerning his future plans. Rumor had been strong that Stahley would resign as coach of the Colonials at the close of this season.

"I honestly don't know what I'll do," Stahley told The Washington Post. "I may make a decision either way in a few weeks.

Baugh's Station Wagon Thrown for Loss

THROWN FOR A LOSS—Sammy Baugh's bright new Packard station wagon came up looking like this yesterday after the Redskin man had a brush with a culvert on Baltimore blvd. Sam was returning to Washington from Philadelphia. He was forced to swerve into the culvert to avoid an onrushing car. A. Leftwich Sinclair, president of Haley's, Inc., which is handling the repairs, is shown checking the damage. Sam was just shaken up

"SLINGING" SAMMY BAUGH Washington's professional football star, received a "knot" on his head and a scratched knee yesterday in a minor traffic accident but his shiny new station wagon fared worse.

Baugh was hurrying back from Philadelphia to crown a queen at the annual Thanksgiving Day football classic between George Washington and Washington and Lee High Schools in Alexandria.

About 5 miles north of College Park on U. S. Route 1, he said, an approaching car swerved toward him and he was forced to run off the road into a culvert. The driver of the other car did not stop, he reported.

The former Texas Christian University star said he was "only slightly shaken up" and the injuries would not prevent his playing in the Redskins-Yanks football game Sunday in Boston.

Two doors and a fender of the $3000 station wagon presented him during "Baugh Day" ceremonies last Sunday at Griffith Stadium were smashed but he was able to drive the vehicle away under its own power.

The delay caused him to miss the morning game, he said.

Penn Beats Cornell, 21-0; Texas Belts Aggies, 32-13

Quakers End Season Undefeated

Philadelphia, Nov. 27 (AP).—Pennsylvania's bruising football team smacked down Cornell, 21 to 0, today to climax its first unbeaten season in 39 years.

Before a sellout crowd of 78,205, the Red and Blue air and ground attack, strong enough to overpower six foes and tie Army 7-7, never moved into high gear against the rugged Cornell defenders. But Penn's defenses were good enough to decide the issue.

Led by its 220-pound All-America candidate, Center Charley Bednarik, Penn players intercepted six Cornell passes and recovered three of the Big Red's seven fumbles.

Lynn Dorset kept the invaders from above Cayuga's waters in the game for three quarters with his aerials, but too many of his tosses backfired.

Bednarik stole two and one each was intercepted by Farquhar Jones, Harry Edenborn, Art Littleton and Johnny Quinn.

Penn's first touchdown followed Bednarik's initial interception. The big center snatched one of Dorset's tosses on his own 45 and ambled 18 yards to the Cornell 37.

Fullback Ray Dooney bucked twice to the seven and Bob Deuber smacked off tackle for the score.

Another Dorset aerial went astray on Cornell's first play, Littleton snatching it and lugging to Cornell's 20.

Deuber and Dooney teamed to work the ball to the one, whence Skippy Minisi hoisted a pass to Littlejohn in the end zone.

Penn's final score also followed a break as Jerry McCarthy fell on a fumbled lateral on the Cornell 15 in the last quarter.

Two plays later, Minisi chucked a 14-yarder to Reserve End Bob Sponaugle, who went the distance.

Utah Crushes State, 40 to 14

By The Associated Press

Salt Lake City, Nov. 27.—Utah's Redskins smashed their Big Seven rivals, the Utah State Aggies, 40 to 14, today in a wild contest that saw the victors play their best football of a sparkling season.

With a flawless demonstration of offensive might, Utah settled the issue before a record-making paid attendance of 29,132 by scoring four touchdowns in the second quarter.

Unable to tally in the first half, the Aggies, who had been highly regarded because of recent triumphs over Colorado and Denver, rebounded in the third period to score one touchdown and stop Utah's rout.

The Redskins, who lost only to Idaho in a nine-game schedule, came back for two touchdowns in the final quarter. The Aggies scored again near the close on a long pass.

Wake Forest Tripped Up by Gamecocks, 6-0

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 27 (AP).—Striking in the closing seconds of the first period after a pass interception set the stage for a 38-yard touchdown march, South Carolina's gritty Gamecocks handed favored Wake Forest a 6-0 defeat here today.

The underdog South Carolinians outrushed their heavy opponents and held their vaunted passing game in check as they closed out their Southern Conference campaign by clinching third place in the circuit.

The game's only score resulted from a sudden shift in the tide of battle. Wake Forest, after wasting three first downs the first time it got the ball, started another drive late in the first period and had progressed to a first down on the South Carolina 34.

Ernie Lawhorne, a junior back from Macon, Ga., then intercepted a pass by the freshman ace of the Deacons, Bill Gregus, on the Carolina 25 and lugged the ball back to his own 42 before being spilled.

Strickland burst through the middle for 13 yards to the Wake Forest 49 as his first offensive gesture.

Then, after Harry Deloach and Bobby Giles had combined to move it to the 38 in two tries, Jim "Droopy" Atwell, got into the act. The Spartanburg, S. C., senior ate half the distance to the Deacon goal and made it a first down on the 19. Strickland carried twice and Giles once for another on the 6.

The Strickland-Giles duo then made it fourth down on the 3 from where Strickland sped around his own left end for the score, fairly flying into the end zone as he lost his footing on the muddy turf.

Lane's conversion attempt was no good and the scoring for the day was over.

29,000 Fans Set Record at Roanoke

Roanoke, Va., Nov 27 (AP).—Rolling with the momentum of the famous flying squadron of the twenties, a fighting Virginia Military Institute eleven roared back in the second half today to defeat Virginia Tech 28 to 14 before a Thanksgiving Day crowd of 29,000 which broke all records for attendance at a sports event in the Old Dominion.

Bobby Thomason, the leeds, Alabama boy with the magic throwing arm, tossed three touchdown passes in the hectic second half to stow away a ball game which seemingly was a Tech victory when the teams left the field at half with Tech holding a two-touchdown lead.

The final Keydet touchdown was scored through the line by Vince Ragunas, Plymouth, Pa., halfback after a Tech pass had been intercepted on the 5-yard line in the waning minutes of the game.

The charging Tech line opened holes in the Kaydet defense and rushed Thomason and Joe Veltri, the New Kensington, Pa., boy who also tosses the leather, on all their pass attempts in the first two quarters. Even then, the Alabama throwing ace might, with luck have connected for two touchdowns. Harold Reed dropped one in the end zone which was laid right in his arms and Dick Deshazo, a Roanoker who played a great game for Tech, came in fast to knock another from the grasp of Joe Gantt of Lynchburg, Va., over the goal line.

Gantt was on the receiving end of two of those which counted for six points each in the second half and it was Reed who intercepted a Tech pass to pave the way for Ragunas' touchdown. Claude Patton, of Decatur, Ga., caught the third successful pass thrown by Thomason.

Indians Clinch Southern Title

Richmond, Va., Nov. 27 (AP).—William and Mary's Indians sewed up the Southern Conference championship here today by passing their way to a 35-0 victory over the University of Richmond Spiders before 15,000 fans in City Stadium. The Indians scored three of their five touchdowns in the second period.

The powerful Tribesmen lived up to the pregame dope and smothered their traditional Thanksgiving Day rivals under a barrage of aerials that rang up a tally before the contest was six minutes old.

After the Indians had traveled 32 yards principally via Stan Magdziak's passing, Fullback Jack (Flying) Cloud drove over from the 5 and Magdziak converted. But it was in the second frame that the Indians really went on the warpath.

Magdziak filled 10 yards to Henry Blanc for one score, flipped a 13-yarder a few minutes later to Vito Ragazzo for another and then Buddy Lex, the freshman flash, hit Ragazzo with a 21-yard toss for the third touchdown. Magdziak's toe was true each time.

The final marker came in the closing minutes of the game with Cloud climaxing a 57-yard drive by going over from the 5-yard stripe.

to the 22, but on the fourth down Cavallo threw that pass to Gunner in the end zone.

Kings Point's Mario Vitello had phenomonal success hitting GW receivers most of the afternoon with six of his tosses being intercepted. However, in the last period, he completed a 28-yard pass to his own end, John Farmer, to put the ball on the GW 25. After Smith went 7 yards, Vitello's short toss to Frank Allen gave the Mariners a first on the 14.

The threat died at this point and so did what little interest was left in the game.

Howard Downs Lincoln, 20-0

Philadelphia, Nov. 27 (AP).—Two long touchdown runs and a pass play gave Howard University a 20-0 victory over Lincoln before 13,000 spectators at Temple Stadium today.

In the second session, Chris Roberson ended a 68-yard advance by scampering the last 39 yards. The third score came on a 43-yard touchdown aerial toss by Charles Ross to Nathaniel Fisher.

Quantico Rolls Over Cherry Point

Quantico, Va., Nov. 27.—The Quantico Marine eleven, self-styled "best service team in the Nation," bolstered its claim with a 47-0 romp over the Cherry Point Marines at Butler Stadium here yesterday.

It was the tenth straight win for the undefeated Marines who will appear in the 'Gator Bowl against Jacksonville Navy for the play-off of the East Coast service championship.

Winner of this game will represent the East in an All-Navy game at San Diego on December 20.

Halfback Franny Puzylowski led the Marine attack yesterday with two touchdowns on smashes of 14 and 4 yards.

Other touchdowns were scored by Doc Barrington, Art Schmagle, Don Clement, Jim Santo, and Jim Brewer. Extra point specialist Tony Messina kicked 5 of 7 conversions.

Joe Di Maggio Most Valuable

Williams, who won the award last year with 224 votes, also lost in a closeduel with another Yankee in '42, getting 249 votes to 270 for winner Joe Gordon. DiMag finished 19th last year with only six votes.

Boudreau, who only the other day was signed to a two-year-managerial contract with the Indians, was recognized for his consistent hitting and great work at the shortstop berth. He easily led all shortstops in fielding and was among the top hitters all season finally ending with .307.

More Sports On Page B-10

Page, whose great relief pitching was largely responsible for winning the flag, had a 14-8 and eight won and lost record and, according to Yankee Manager Bucky Harris, saved at least 16 others.

Kell batted .319 and drove in 90 runs for the Tigers while McQuinn, cast off by the Athletics in the winter of 1946, was picked up on a gamble by the Yankees and proceeded to bat .304 in 144 games besides performing nearly flawlessly around first base.

Gordon batted only .272, but drove in 93 runs and hit 29 round-trippers for the Indians.

Navy Quarters 1 Wins

Fullback Dick Smith smashed 3 yards for a touchdown and kicked two extra points to lead the Navy Quarters "I" eleven to a 14-12 victory over Montgomery Junior College at West Potomac Park yesterday.

Fones, Via Smith Pace Presidents

Led by Corky Fones, Bobby Via and Billy Smith, George Washington High's Presidents defeated their traditional rivals, the Washington-Lee Little Generals, 32-7, yesterday to win the Northern Virginia Class A Conference championship before an overflow crowd of 12,000 at G. W. stadium.

With their triumph, the Presidents again robbed the Little Generals of their hopes of scoring permanent possession of the Old Oaken Bucket trophy that goes to the team winning the G. W. vs. W.-Lee game three years in succession. G. W. tied the Little Generals in 1941 and '42 to stop two game W.-L victory streaks.

Presidents Start Fast

Fones, whose older brother Lee scored both G. W. touchdowns when the Presidents beat W.-L., 12-9, back in 1935, figured in all of the first four scoring plays. Via tallied twice, and Smith, who sparkled on defense as well as offense, scored once.

In the first quarter, after the Presidents had advanced 33 yards to the W.-L. eight, Corky served as middle man in a double reverse which began with Bob Hanna and wound up with Via scoring around right end. Fones passed 18 yards to Smith to make it 12-0, G. W., early in the second quarter. Fones converted.

Following a 27-yard sustained land advance, Fones scored G. W.'s third touchdown a few moments later, as he scampered around left end 20 yards into the end zone.

With G. W. leading, 18-7, in the third quarter, Fones again hit the scoring trail. This time he grabbed a lateral from Smith and scooted 75 yards down his left sideline to cross the goal line. He again converted.

The last G. W. touchdown came on a 40-yard drive which was climaxed by Via's 25-yard burst through right tackle.

W.-L.'s lone score came on the end of a 63-yard march, the last 32 being covered on a pass from Dickie Lewis to Bob Calvert. Lewis converted.

G. W. wound up its season with 7-2-1 record as compared to V.-L.'s 7-4.

Rutgers Beats Brown, 27-20, For 8th Win

Providence, R. I., Nov. 27 (AP).—Rutgers' hard-smashing Scarlets completed the most successful football season in the New Jersey institution's long history by trouncing Brown, 27-20, before an 18,000 Thanksgiving morning crowd.

The visitors from New Brunswick, beaten only by Columbia, 40-28, in their opening game clinched their eighth straight win by exploding for three touchdowns during the second period and cashing an intercepted pass for another score in the finale.

The sharpshooting Frank Burns, who completed 45 out of 103 passes for 11 touchdowns this season, ended Rutgers' first thrust, which started in midfield, by going over from the 2 early in the second quarter.

Shortly after that the flashy Herman Hering galloped 75 yards from inside his right tackle and before the first half ended, Burns completed two long passes to Winger Bill Hatchett for Rutgers' third touchdown.

Brown's touchdowns were scored by Fred Kozak, Bill Houston and Don Campbell.

Lions Oppose Reds Tonight

Hugh "Scotty" Mair, injured wingman who set a sensational pace in early season, rejoins the Washington Lions on Uline ice tonight when they oppose the Providence Reds in an American Hockey League match at 8:30 o'clock.

This marks the final appearance of the Lions at Uline Arena for the duration of Ice-Capades, their next home match being booked with the Indianapolis Capitols on December 16.

Mair returns to action with Walter "Rockabye" Babey, defenseman, who sat out last Tuesday night's game with Hershey here due to an upset stomach. There also is a chance that Herb Lovett, newly acquired winger from the Chicago Blackhawks, has recovered sufficiently from charley-horses to see action.

The Rhode Island Reds are bringing in the highest scoring team in the circuit, and will introduce no fewer than five players included among the league's scorers.

Fairfax Beaten, 20-15

A 60-yard pass play with Buddy Sapp pitching to End Page Thompson as the final gun went off gave Mount Vernon High of Alexandria a dramatic 20-15 victory over Fairfax yesterday before 3500 fans at Mount Vernon.

With Fairfax leading, 15-13 and two seconds left to play, Mount Vernon lined up on its own 40. Sapp, a substitute halfback tossed to Reserve End Thompson in the right flat as the gun went off. Thompson eluded Fairfax Safety Man Larry Fones and sprinted for the winning touchdown.

Coolidge Bows, 13-6, to Parkersburg

Parkersburg, W. Va., Nov 27.—Parkersburg High rallied after Coolidge had marched 53 yards in the opening minutes for a six-pointer to carve a 13-6 decision over 5000 chilled holiday fans at Stadium Field.

Parkersburg scored midway in the second period, going 54 yards in just four plays. Jerry Nohe passed to Bernie Allman on the Colt's 41. Nohe faked a pass and ran to the 25. Fullback Bob Sayre drove to the 13. Nohe faked another pass and skirted around end for the score. Starr's kick for the point was good.

Allman's interception of Houston's pass on the 36 set up the final score. Three straight bucks by Sayre placed the ball on the nine and after an incompleted pass Allman went over after taking a lateral from Starr.

Paced by Brosnan and Houston, the Colts rolled up 12 first downs and a total of 180 yards against 269 yards and 11 first downs for the Big Reds.

The Colts' Jock Brosnan picked up 18 yards on the game's first two plays, then carried to the 32. After an exchange of 5-yard penalties, Shaffer plunged to the Parkersburg 27.

Jess Houston passed to Rohr for a first down on 15 and a second pass to Rohr was completed at 11. After Brosnan plowed to the 8, Houston hit Rohr, unguarded in the end zone.

Parkersburg had the ball on the Coolidge one-yard stripe as time ran out in the fourth quarter after Allman had intercepted Houston's desperate pass.

As a result of yesterday's win St. Peter's will meet St. Martin's for the CYO championship on the East Ellipse Field December 6.

Arkansas Beats Out Tulsa, 27-13

Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 27 (AP).—The first half passing of Ken Holland and second half running of Aubrey Fowler gave the University of Arkansas Razorback football team a 27-13 triumph over the University of Tulsa today, its first victory in the schools' traditional series, since 1941.

The largest local crowd in history—22,000—watched the Golden Hurrican trade touchdowns with their Southwestern Conference rivals in the first half, only to fade in the final two periods.

Playing their final college game, Holland and Fowler figured in all the Arkansas scoring. Holland passed to Ends Bud Canada and Jim Cox for first period scoring plays that went 43 and 17 yards, respectively, and Fowler broke away for touchdown sprints of 19 and 42 yards in the last half.

Both Tulsa scores were by Halfback J. R. Boone, the first in the opening quarter from the 1-foot line after the Hurricane had pushed from the Arkansas 30 following Fullback Hardy Brown's recovery of Leon Campbell's fumble on the Razorbacks' first scrimmage play of the game.

Boone scored again in the second period, going 3 yards for the tally after taking a 10-yard pass from Quarterback Jim Finks. Tackle Nelson Greene's interception of a Holland pass had started the Hurricane drive from the Arkansas 34.

They'll See Army-Navy

Post Contest Winner Shares Luck With Two Wounded Vets

TWO CORPORALS, wounded in combat, will be the Army-Navy guests of Trygve Tuve, 14-year-old amazing repeat winner in The Washington Post football contest.

They are Army Corpl. Bernard Martin, patient at Walter Reed, and Marine Corpl. Lewis Auricchio, Bethesda Naval Hospital patient.

Trygve, son of Dr. and Mrs. Merle Tuve, 135 Hesketh st., Chevy Chase, miraculously defied the law of averages by winning the final contest last week over 31,674 entries. It was particularly unbelievable in that young Tuve came out on top in the fifth contest over 36,474 others.

After winning the first time, the Leland Junior High student made arrangements to take along his best pal, 14-year-old Johnny Skilling, 136 Hesketh st., as his guest on The Washington Post all-expenses-paid trip to Philadelphia for the service classic.

When informed that he had won again, he thought at first he would take his parents. Then he decided to share his good fortune with wounded service men representing the two branches. Tuve's parents heartily indorsed the idea, immediately relinquishing their places.

Auricchio, the Marine corporal who will represent the Navy, is from Gloversville, N. Y. He's the son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Auricchio.

Fighting with the Sixth Marine Division on Okinawa, Auricchio was wounded in the eye by Jap mortar fire. Hospitalized since June, 1945, he has been a patient at Bethesda for 18 months, undergoing plastic surgery.

Martin, the Army corporal, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Martin of Clover, Va. Martin, 22, was hit in both legs by German artillery fire at Saint Lo. He fought with the 112th Regiment of the Twenty-eighth Division. Wounded in August, 1944, he has been hospitalized since and has been at Walter Reed a year.

Martin and Auricchio were selected with the help of Red Cross recreational workers—Kay Ahern, at Bethesda, and Miss Ruby Patterson, at Walter Reed.

Hefty Top Two-Year-Old of Maryland Fall Season

Bill Bennings

DEAR FOLKS:

Jockey Nick Combest, injured here on the Wednesday program, remains in dangerous condition in a Baltimore hospital. He suffered a head injury as well as face lacerations. He was leading the riders here with 12 winners. Forty-eight trainers have saddled winners here with F. A. Bonsal, jr., leading the way with six successes. Favorites are batting .48 with 42 public choices getting home on top. Freddie Burton racing secretary at Charles Town, was a visitor before reporting at the West Virginia track which opens Monday. The drawing for the auto being raffled for the benefit of the Swamp Fever fund will be made in the winner's circle after the running of the $20,000 Bryan and O'Hara on Saturday. The horsemen's Benevolent Protective Association reports some $5000 will be raised. "I'm told the Maryland tracks are having some arguments about next year's dates. Jockey Al Bocson, who did real fighting in the war, is going to make 112 pounds at Charles Town and hopes to regain his prewar form. See you on the rail. BILL.

Georgia Tech Gets Post-Season Offer

Atlanta, Nov. 27 (AP).—Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Dodd said today the once-beaten Engineers had recived an offer for a postseason football game against a yet unnamed opponent in the Los Angeles Coliseum, December 20. The contest will be sponsored by the American Legion, he said.

Dodd, whose team has lost only to Alabama, said the Engineers are "definitely interested." No decision will be made, however, until Tech winds up its regular season against Georgia Saturday.

He Outruns Vashti, Wins By Length

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 27—High Ground Stable's Hefty, who made his racing debut on August 30, proved the top 2-year-old of Maryland's fall racing season when he won the $10,000 added Endurance Handicap, the East's final juvenile test.

Performing before a Thanksgiving Day crowd of 20,000 the colt stuck to his running guns to take a length victory from Belair Stud's Vashti. A half length behind the place came Alan T. Clarke's highly regarded Fritz Maisel.

Installed a light favorite over his two money rivals, Hefty returned a $5.60 mutuel as the fifth winning public choice of the afternoon.

Close to Track Record

In earning his spurs for future stake events, Hefty was clocked in 1:44 4-5 for the 1 mile an 70 yards, only 1 4-5 seconds over a track record shared by Flat Iron and Sortie.

Although Hefty won and was in front after 6 furlongs in 1:12 3-5 and a mile in 1:40, Vashti stamped himself as a Kentucky Derby prospect, closing with a bold rush at the abbreviated distance. He was wearing down Hefty at every stride at the end.

Fritz Maisel, winner of the $10,000 added Bowie Breeders' Stake, made his challenge in the stretch but was a tiring third in the field scratched down to seven starters.

With Jockey Carson Kirk, his regular rider under suspension, Hefty was ridden by Arnold Kirkland and the Baltimore boy turned in a heady performance.

Off to an Early Lead

Kirkland took Hefty to the front in the opening jumps and kept him there. However, he rated Hefty and asked the son of Maedic and Peaceful for speed only when necessary. It was this conservation of punch that allowed the colt to withstand Vashti's great stretch rush.

By winning today, Hefty made it four victories in his last five starts. He has been postward seven times in all since starting his career. The colt took down $7475 to bring his total earnings to $13,425.

Successful daily double players, who invested in the 1-and-3 combination, collected a $247 daily double. V. L. Shea's Overtake took the first race at $5.20 but the big monetary punch came in the second event. J. Morello's Sir Imp was the winner at $38.60. Jockey Eddie Ballenger who rode Mrs. N. L. Brown's Casset to second money claimed a foul but was waved aside by the stewards.

Mildred's Back in Town

Mildred Burke, the feminine champion, will wrestle Wednesday night at Turner's Arena, meeting Dot Dodson, of Oklahoma City, in a one-hour time limit match.

49ers Whip Brooklyn to Cinch Second

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—Displaying ground and air superiority, the San Francisco 49ers beat Brooklyn Dodgers, 21 to 7, before 9837 at Ebbets Field today for a Thanksgiving Day victory that clinched second place for them in the Western Division of the All-America Conference.

The Dodgers were held scoreless until the final period.

San Francisco, paced by Frankie Albert, John Strzkalski, Len Eshmont and Norman Standlee, scored before the game was little more than 3 minutes under way. After the Brooklyn kick-off, the Forty-Niners drove 70 yards to a touchdown. Fullback Standlee completed the drive by going around his own left end from the 9-stripe for the tally.

The crimson-jersied Californians made their next touchdown just 10 seconds after the second period opened. They achieved the marker with the most spectacular play of the game—a 57-yard pass from Quarterback Albert to Eshmont, who sprinted across the line standing up. The play netted 60 yards.

Late in the period, San Francisco scored again after a 44-yard run by Strzkalski to the 1-yard line. On the next play Strzkalski plunged for the touchdown.

After seven minutes of play in the final period, Brooklyn achieved its touchdown by virtue of a 96-yard drive in 10 plays. Mickey Colmer, fullback, smashed through the line from the five stripe and Phil Martinovich kicked the point.

Commission Investigates Death of Thoroughbred

Baltimore, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Maryland Racing Commission will hold a hearing here tomorrow on the circumstances of the death of a thoroughbred at Laurel.

Chairman Stuart S. Janney said the commission had unofficial reports the horse, Saguro, was hit from behind last Saturday with a charge of rock salt while being trained in a starting gate. The horse bolted, ran into the rail, broke its leg and had to be destroyed, Janney said.

Navy Plebes Defeat Farragut Academy, 14-0

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 27 (AP).—A long pass play and runback of an intercepted pass gave the Navy Plebes a 14-0 football triumph over Admiral Farragut Academy of Toms River, N. J., here today.

A 45-yard pass from Bob Lawrence to Willie Weaver gave the Plebes their first score in the second period. In the final quarter, Joe Hunt, a guard, intercepted a Farragut pass and ran it 60 yards for score. Roger Drew made good both conversions.

Out Hunting

By Jack Bell

WILD TURKEY HUNTERS are in for a new experience next Wednesday when the season opens in Cumberland State Forest, Virginia.

It is in the Cumberland Forest that the State turkey farm is located and there are several small refuges scattered through the area.

At the request of the Conservation Commission, the season, after a lapse of two years, will be opened for the three days. However, hunters are going to find is the sport made difficult by innovation of the gobbler law.

Gobblers only are to be permitted killed and the law will be strictly enforced.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR I. T. Quinn announced that at least four States have had the gobbler law for years, and it has been found that no undue hardship has been imposed upon the hunter.

There was no season last year because there were evidence that the turkey population was too low.

Quinn said: "In some States where the gobbler law is in effect, it has been found feasible to allow an additional hunting season in the spring to take gobblers only."

The breeding potential of the turkey hen is high, and populations rapidly increase if hens are protected. In order to keep from violating the law, hunters have to be careful before they shoot, especially in view of the fact that a young gobbler is hard to distinguish from a hen.

Gil Dodds Wins Despite Blisters

Cincinnati, Nov. 27 (AP).—Gilbert Dodds, one of the world's greatest trackmen, today won the thirty-seventh annual 6-mile cross country run here for the fourth consecutive time. He was hard pushed all the way by Mike Stavole of Miami University.

Dodds, running under the colors of the Wheaton A. C., of Wheaton, Ill., made the run in 29 minutes 44 seconds, just 12 seconds under the course record he established a year ago.

The winner, holder of the world's mile mark of 4:06.4, finished with a spurt to widen his small lead over Stavole to 20 yards. Dodds picked up a couple of foot blisters but he led all the way.

One on the Aisle—

Geniuses Are People ...With Hepburn At the Keyboard

By Richard L. Coe

THE CAPITOL'S "Song of Love" not only has some of the finest music the screen has offered; it also has a warmth and restraint not usually found in film biographies about the great composers. It is the sort of picture people will relish again and again as the years go by.

The trouble with saying anything like this about a picture is that such a description may overstate the case. No, "Song of Love" is not a great, magnificent picture and it will not thrill you. But it will satisfy you and that is indeed good praise.

With generally factual honesty, "Song of Love" tells of the lives of Robert Schumann, his wife Clara Wieck and their friends, Johannes Brahms and Franz Liszt. The music is by the three men, with the emphasis on Mrs. Schumann's faithful work, as a piano recitalist, to acquaint the world with her husband's music after his death. This gentle crusade is musical history and Metro is to be congratulated on treating it with an over-all lack of pomposity. While the film has its gee-whiz-a-genius moments, its taste in this respect is a marked contrast to that sorry venture of a few months ago, "Carnegie Hall."

The soundtrack piano is played by Arthur Rubinstein, with William Steinberg conducting Metro's symphony. Technically the recording is clean and good.

But while the Rubinstein fingers are responsible for the clarity of the music, the playing you see is Katharine Hepburn's and she does the finest shadow playing we ever recall watching. Through the warmth of her acting and the likable dignity of her performance, Miss Hepburn sets the tone which gives "Song of Love" its spirit. Here is a fine performance from an intelligent actress, one which should be honored when the year's awards are distributed.

"SONG OF LOVE." M-G-M release produced and directed by Clarence Brown. Screen play by Ivan Tors, Irmgard Von Cube, Allen Vincent and Robert Ardrey from a play by Bernard Schubert and Mario Silva. Music arranged from Schumann, Brahms and Liszt by Bronislau Kaper. William Steinberg conducting the M-G-M Symphony. Piano solos by Artur Rubenstein. At the Capitol.

Life With the Schumanns

The story emphasizes the home life of the Schumanns. Robert's young pupil, Brahms, lived with them and there is an evident attempt to suggest the happy domesticity of the Clarence Day family. While parts of this may tend to cloy on some in an audience, the effect is so much less fullblown than the usual one of composers' private lives as caught by the movies that the cautious reviewer may easily lose his perspective.

Paul Henreid is Schumann. It's not an easy role, and while Henreid doesn't handle it with all the facility one might wish, he is acceptable. Robert Walker's Brahms is on dangerously thin ice, but one can't carp too much about having the boyish Waller on deck to please what one supposes must be called "the younger set." Henry Daniell brings his icy chill to the role of Liszt. But it's Miss Hepburn who casts her honest spell over them all.

For those who would ask what "pieces" are played, here they are:

Schumann is represented by "Dedication," "Traumerei," excerpts from "Carnival" and "Faust," the piano concerto in A minor, the piano quintet in E flat major, "Verrufene Stelle" and "Arabesque."

Brahms excerpts include his Hungarian dances 5 and 6, "Lullaby," Rhapsody in G minor, the second movement of the First Symphony and a waltz in A flat major.

Liszt's piano concerto in E flat major (the one you know!), the "Mephisto" waltz and his paraphrase on Schumann's "Dedication" complete the score.

As a final warning: don't expect the definitive handling of music and musicians. Just go to be quietly satisfied and you will be.

On the Stage

The Capitol's stage show starts off far more impressively than usual, with Sam Jack Kaufman leading his orchestra in a joint Thanksgiving Day-Freedom Train saluate. Radio's Charles Edwards is at the mike for poetic readings and Kay De Witt sings impressively. In a smooth effective style she sings "America" and Irving Berlin's patriotic twins, "Freedom Train" and "God Bless America." Miss De Witt is developing into "a fine, capable artist.

Headliner Marilyn Maxwell, the blonde Hollywood player, is the headliner and she's worth the honor. In a black lace dress over flesh colored something or other, this young lady looks good enough to eat. She sings that dry ballad, "Civilization," and the Calypsos' "You Like It" among other things and does fine. Her years of singing with a band make her a worthwhile stage personality.

Connie Stevens, a drum majorette; Roy Douglas, who talks to himself, and the dance-kidding Albins complete the bill.

TOMORROW: Richard L. Coe reviews Shirley Temple and Ronald Reagan in "That Hagen Girl," at the Warner.

Fighting Rabbits Developed By Breeding Experiments

By Robert S. Bird

Bar Harbor, Me., Nov 27 (NYHT). A "man-eating" rabbit, puny in size, golden orange in color, which crouches like a panther, makes menacing noises, and springs with bared teeth at man or beast, has been developed in genetic experiments at the Roscoe B. Jackson Memorial Laboratory here.

Scientists are also experimenting with hop-less rabbits, bark-less dogs, four-eared cats and neurotic mice.

The emergence of the lion-hearted rabbit has occurred in a strain known as Race 10 of the laboratory's rabbit stocks. Dr. Paul E. Sawin, in charge of rabbit genetics. In the course of his study of the principles of normal growth, which is a basic research in the laboratory's cancer studies, began inbreeding these rabbits 10 years ago. The present animals were developed from many generations of matings of parent to offspring.

Opposite Type Produced

Now what has been evolved is a glamorously colored animal, smaller than most rabbit breeds, and far more active than others. But what surprises the geneticists is that each new litter is producing individuals of wholly opposite types; either excessively friendly bunnies, or completely vicious ones. There are no in-betweens.

The rowdy rabbits, when approached, dance around like sparring boxers, and crouch, cat fashion, before springing in for the kill, using teeth and claws.

Dr. Sawin has not yet derived any special significance for the human race from this by-product of a genetics experiment.

But elsewhere around the laboratory the behavior of a whole Noah's Ark of animals is the subject of experiments which may have great significance some day for man's understanding of himself. These animal behavior studies are being made by scientists headed by Dr. Paul J. Scott under the supervision of Dr. Clarence J. Little, director of the laboratory.

Station Escaped Fire

The zoologists and psychologists are seeking answers to some profound questions from their animal wards. What is the cause of fighting? Of persecution? Of fear? What are the factors that make for leadership? Dominance?

The subjects of their experiments—the animals themselves—are housed in great barns or penned in open fields at the laboratory's Hamilton station at Salisbury Cove. This lies outside Bar Harbor, about six miles from the main buildings of the laboratory which were destroyed, along with some 90,000 mice of great value to cancer research, when the October 23 fire razed much of Mount Desert Island.

Here is perhaps one of the most astonishing collections of dogs anywhere.

Here are the Basengi dogs, born without a bark, dogs born blind and dogs born deaf, and dogs with smooth coats and long beards. Strangely enough, they are all appealing in manner.

There is a whole loft filled with cats. There are four-eared cats, cats with too many toes, cats with not enough toes, and some Siamese and Persian crosses that are sensational to look at, including a red, ring-tailed Siamese.

Tiny Radio Utilized

To measure behavior characteristics, Dr. John L. Fuller has a tiny radio transmitter which can be strapped to a dog. The transmitter sends to Dr. Fuller, a stream of data signals on the heartbeat and respiration of the dog as he reacts to an experimental situation.

The laboratory's goats are helping toward an understanding of what constitutes leadership. Scientists are trying to learn why the dominant goat, who butts the other goats around, is by no means necessarily the leader when the goat flock decides to go somewhere. Is dominance separated from leadership?

Sometime in the future it may be possible to refer certain human problems directly to the proper animals for experimental investigation.

Opera Association Disavows Patrons' Acts Before Camera

New York, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—The Metropolitan Opera Association today formally disavowed responsibility for socially prominent patrons "who go to extreme ends" to get themselves photographed at the opera's annual opening nights.

In a statement which avoided mention of any names or instances, the Metropolitan said it couldn't pass on the patrons who buy tickets or control their conduct.

The most unconventional news photograph at this year's opening was provided by the elderly and wealthy socialite widow, Mrs. Betty Henderson, who swung a well revealed leg up on a table in the opera's bar while the cameras clicked.

Mrs. Henderson, lavishly gowned and with a tiara on her head and orchids at her shoulder, was quoted as having remarked while she posed: "What's Marlene Dietrich got that I haven't got?"

Metropolitan refrained from specifying whether its statement was aimed at such patrons as Mrs. Henderson and socialite Richard Knight who stood on his head for the photographers at the 1939 opening.

George A. Sloan, chairman of the board of the Metropolitan, said that many complaints had been received from friends of opera because the pictures had been seen by countless people unfamiliar with the Metropolitan "who must wonder if these pictures reflect the character" of its audiences.

He said many had suggested that the management ban from the house "individuals who go to extreme ends in having themselves photographed."

The statement pointed out that the Metropolitan's general manager, Edward Johnson, and his assistants, have the task of maintaining "high operatic standards" rather than passing on the likely behavior of those who buy tickets.

"We have no desire to say who shall or who shall not attend the opera," Sloan said. "Neither have we a desire to write a code of manners for the very few who may need it."

But Sloan insisted that 99 per cent who attend opera "come with the purpose of hearing what is fine and beautiful in music. I doubt if many of them are interested in being photographed."

School Boys Learn to Cook Man-Sized Breakfasts

Washington-Lee Class Also Studies Washing the Dishes

By Lucia Brown

LEARNING to cook a man-sized breakfast is one of the chief projects of the new home economics class for boys at Washington-Lee High School in Arlington.

Ten boys in their early 'teens—all members of the seventh grade—are enrolled in the class, the first of its kind ever given at the school.

"Oh boy, this is a lot more fun than shop!" cried one eager youngster the other day, as he laid strips of bacon neatly in a frying pan. "You get to eat, too!"

The boys all elected to take the one-semester home economics course. At the beginning of the year, when it was found the classes in shop work would be overcrowded, there was a call for volunteers to take home work instead.

"Some of the fellows thought it was sissy and wouldn't volunteer at first," one of the boys said, "but I thought I'd like it and I sure do!"

Teacher of the class is attractive Mrs. Hilda Dryer, who has a son of her own about the same age as her pupils. She started the class off in September with a course in first aid, which was followed by instruction in safety and good grooming. The group turned to cooking on the first of November and have been having lab—or kitchen—work only about 10 days. The remainder of the semester will be devoted to cooking, however.

"When the boys get through they'll know all about getting breakfast and cleaning up afterward—everything from squeezing orange juice to putting the last dish away," says Mrs. Dryer. "They've cooked various cereals already. Today is the first time they've tried bacon and eggs. They will work on other foods, have more training in setting the table, serving the food and washing dishes in a sanitary way."

The boys, who wear kitchen aprons of their own choosing—and white caps, if they've a mind to—work in groups of two. Cooperation and competition both wax keen as they learn to operate the stoves, measure ingredients, cook food to just the right turn.

From the way the boys take to the course there should be—along about 1960—at least 10 wives who won't have to worry about getting up to get breakfast in the morning.

Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

Clubs Make Christmas Plans

When the Silver Spring Women's Club holds its annual Christmas tree program and tea Wednesday, 2 p. m., in the Woodside Methodist Church, each member will bring individual gifts for the Camp and Hospital Services of Montgomery County Red Cross Chapter and for other welfare work selected by the club's public welfare department.

A holiday program will be put on by the art, drama, literature, fine arts and music departments of the club. Three scenes will depict traditional Christmas observances in Mexico, Sweden and France. The Mexican scene will include the dance of the jarabe by Miss Alecia Terrazas and Homero Vega of the Mexican Embassy staff.

Universalist Church Plans Supper and Bazaar

Members of the Woman's Association of the Universalist National Memorial Church, 16th st. at S, are making extensive plans for their annual turkey dinner and bazaar which will be held in the parish rooms of the church Wednesday.

The dinner, for which reservations should be made at the church by Monday noon, is under the joint chairmanship of Mrs. Francis W. Erdman and Mrs. Walter Pack. It will be served from 5 to 7 p. m. in Perkins Hall.

The bazaar will be open from 2 till 9 p. m. in the Weston Room. Mrs. William H. McGlauflin is general chairman. Navy at National Gallery

Top Brass, Then and Now, Is in Art Show; Diplomat To Have Surprise Wedding

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

AT THE NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART this week and continuing until December 14 is an exhibition rather unimaginatively titled "Men of Action of the Naval Services, World War II." Actually it's an informal collection of portraits executed by three of the Navy's topflight combat artists plus a number of drawings and paintings by enlisted men. The portraitists are Bill Draper, Dwight Shepler, and Lieut. Comdr. Albert Murray, who is still with the Navy. Most interesting angle of the exhibition is a series of duplicate portraits of Navy "brass," done with an intervening span of years and under totally different conditions. There's a Draper portrait of General Vandegrift painted in a Guadalcanal bamboo grove. Three years later Shepler did the Marine Corps commandant at his Washington desk, all smooth and sparkling eyed.

DRAPER

Reversing the process, Shepler painted Admiral Halsey off Guadalcanal, shirt open, life belt around waist, face haggard and strained. As contrast, Draper's postwar portrait at Pearl Harbor shows the admiral relaxed, humorous, and, as neatly ironic background, a Japanese print showing Nipponese fleeing from the tempest. The show is a new twist, and good.

Former Minister Marries

WITHOUT any previous announcement, Alexandre Cretziano and Elise Stirbey Boxshall are being married quietly today. Alexandre, former Romanian Minister to Turkey, is a son of the late Georges Cretziano, Romanian Minister to Washington from 1926 to 1929.

One of the first of Washington's rapidly enlarging group of political refugees, he arrived in this country 14 months ago. During the recent Communist-dominated trial of Romanian National Peasant Party Leader Juliu Maniu, he was condemned to life imprisonment in absentia.

The new Mme. Cretziano is a daughter of the late Prince Barbu Stirbey, Romania's grand seigneur whose grandfather was the last ruling Prince of Walachia. Several times Premier of Romania, Prince Stirbey continued his political activities until his death two years ago. During the war he left Bucharest for Cairo to head the first armistice negotiations.

On her mother's side, Mme. Cretziano is a granddaughter of Princess Georges de Caraman-Chimay. Her mother, the former Princess Nadaje Bibescu, is still living in Romania. Her sisters are Mme. Nicu Constantinescu and Baroness Serban Slondor. Her third sister, who died in Switzerland a year ago, was the wife of Grigore Buzesti, a recent arrival in Washington and one of the four condemned to life imprisonment at the Maniu trials.

Mme. Cretziano recently obtained a divorce from Colonel Edwin Boxshall, N. B. E. of London. Her children are John Boxshall and Mme. Vanya Negropontes of Bucharest. Alexandre Cretziano's first wife was Ena Bratianu.

Incidentally, he and his bride are first cousins, his mother having been Prince Stirbey's sister Zoe. His stepmother, who made many friends here when his stepfather was Minister in Washington, is now Princess Moruzi. The wedding ceremony is being performed by Judge Bentley.

Your Questions on Homemaking

What is the best way to store a fruitcake? I wrapped mine in wax paper and stored it in a metal container. This morning I found mold on the bottom of the cake? What caused this? J. W.

The mold on the bottom of the fruit cake was probably caused by storing the cake where it was too warm. Remove the molded portion and wrap the cake in cheese cloth moistened in fruit juice, or if you prefer, wine or brandy. Store the cake in the refrigerator if you do not have a cooler place than where it was stored. As an added precaution against mold on the bottom, you could place a layer of brown sugar in the bottom of the container before placing the cake in it.

I have a winter white wool dress that has a gold nailhead design on it. The nailheads have tarnished and I would like to know how to restore their luster without damaging the dress.
R. F. S.

There seems to be no home method which will remove this tarnish and not harm the dress. I would suggest you take your dress to a reliable dry cleaner for advice as to whether the tarnish can successfully be removed.

My new mouton lamb coat, which was shipped here from another city, has several deep creases in it as a result of the packing. Two weeks of hanging in a closet has not improved this. Please tell me how to remove these creases. B. W.

As the coat hangs, occasionally brush the creases with a stiff brush. If this doesn't remove the creases, take it to a cleaning establishment which cleans furs. Such a company has special equipment for brushing which will probably remove the creases.

I have an old pine chest which has been refinished on the outside. What can be done to remove the musty odor from the drawers and inside of the chest? Washing and sunning have helped only a little. Will varnishing help? W. L. G.

Yes, varnishing will definitely help remove the odor of the chest. After it has been varnished, close the chest so that it will dry more slowly and thus kill the odor. When well dry, open to remove the varnish odor. Using sachet in the drawers will give the drawers a pleasing fragrance.

Could you tell me how I can stop stairs from squeaking? Nearly every step makes a noise and the sound is very annoying. M. S.

The creak in the stairs can be taken out by tightly fastening the tread (the part of the stairs you step on) to the riser (the vertical board at the back of the stairs). To do this, ask someone to stand on the tread to force it down against the riser and drive 2-inch finishing nails through it and into the riser. Drive the nails in pairs and at opposite angles so they will not loosen. One pair of nails driven into the riser in the middle of the step is usually sufficient. The nailheads should be sunken below the surface of the wood and hidden with plastic wood in the color of the steps. Another method is to drill a hole through the tread over the middle of the riser to take a long, slender, flat-headed screw.

How can I clean parquet without benefit of a vacuum cleaner? B. W.

As I understand it, your problem is how to remove the dust and dirt from the cracks in the parquet floor. Without a vacuum, it seems the only way would be to brush it out with a broom or a small hand brush and pick it up with a treated dust mop or, if too much for that, in a dust pan. When all dust is removed from the cracks in this way, polish well with the dust mop.

Can you tell me how to build a storage closet in basement to be used for winter and summer storage of clothes, blankets and luggage? Our basement is not damp, but things mold in summer. Should there be a ventilating space between outside wall, above ceiling, under floor? Does cedar lining have any value? If you cannot tell me, will you please advise me where I may obtain this information? R. M. W.

As it happens I have known of several persons who have tried to use a storage room in the basement and have not found it successful in this high humidity climate. Because of this, I would advise you to exhaust every other above-ground possibility for storage space before going ahead with your basement plan. Sometimes an opening can be made into unused space above a garage or under an eave. If this is possible your storage space will be much drier and can be constructed much less expensively than one in the basement. Of course, some basements are drier than others and if you have lived in your house through all four seasons and know its actual condition on this score, you may wish to proceed with your original plan. To answer your questions specifically would take more space than is allowed me here, for there are so many factors involved. You will find the entire subject of dampness in cellars and what to do about it discussed in the book, "First Aid for the Ailing House," by Roger B. Whitman. Another possible source of help would be to discuss your problem with persons who do home improvement. Look under "Home Improvement" in the yellow pages of the directory.

How do you remove cream stain out of silk rayon house coat? L. M. C.

Sponge the cream stain with carbon tetrachloride to remove the greasy part of the stain, then sponge with cold water. If this doesn't remove all of it, sprinkle the damp stain with powdered pepsin, let it stand a half hour. Brush it off and rinse the spot well.

Daily Dozen Can Be Fun

By Ida Jean Kain

Exercises can be fun, and more exhilarating than dancing. Take them to music and feel the rhythm in the uplifting stretch and smooth side bends, all done in harmonious movement to the cadence of music. There's joy in rhythm.

Of course, if you think of exercise as dull and arduous, it's difficult to whip up much enthusiasm. Why not regard them as a welcome break in the morning's work routine, a time to frolic through some stretches, twists and bends? The way t oget the most out of it is to untie your apron strings, and unzip the housedress at the side so as to have freedom of motion. Then turn on the radio or phonograph to a lively tune and stretch and swing for sheer joy of feeling the release of muscles that are stiff from the forward bending, with arms out in front position, which is necessary in doing most housework.

The working girl can't take exercise in the middle of the morning, but it's an ideal time for the homemaker. The house is warm . . . it's never a good plan to work muscles that are stiff and cold . . . the family is off to work and school and the house is all yours.

Exercise can be most informal, and still very slimming. Just stretch, centering the up-pull through the middle of the figure to get those important middle muscles. Then holding the up-stretch, bend, centering the bend through the midriff, and keep it rhythmical to avoid any jerkiness.

To straighten up shoulders, swing alternate arms in wide, backward circles, slowly and rhythmically, and as you swing stretch upward through the midriff and get a real lift out of the exercise.

Man in Middle Fifties Marries Again; His Wife Has Son, 10, Whose Father Then Stops Support Payments, Making Stepfather Furious

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Our beloved mother passed away three years ago, and father, who is in his middle fifties, got married again a year ago to a very fine woman, a divorcee, who has a son 10 years old.

We, two sisters and a brother, like her very much, as she has made a good wife and good home for father, who was always a fine husband and parent. Incidentally, each of us is married and we all have children of our own.

When our stepmother's first husband learned she had married again, he stopped sending money for the support of his son, and in the near future he will be brought to trial for failure to provide.

Man Refuses To Be Sucker

FATHER says he has reason to think that, inasmuch as the man is a member of a fraternal order, he will go free, relieved of obligation to support the boy; and if that happens, father says he will not support his stepson any longer, even if he has to give up his wife and home.

He says he loves his wife and home, but would sooner give up both than be made a fool of, by the other man. He likes the child, but says he won't be played for a sucker by the boy's father. He says if the man were dead, it would be a different matter; but he is alive and better off financially.

Is father's attitude justified? Or should he still support the boy if the real father isn't made to do so? Please state your opinion, to help him and us. With your advice, we will be better able to talk to him; so please answer soon.

R. F.

Man's Already Been A Sucker

DEAR R. F.: If the boy's father has funds and has been brought to book for wilful non-support, it isn't likely that he can swing a "fixed" verdict absolving him of guilt or duty to provide. In general, laws governing child welfare are scrupulously administered.

However, in the event he should connive legalistic release from his moral obligation and your dad undertakes to retaliate by walking out on the woman he loves rather than support her son, then he (your dad) will be a sucker, sure enough.

In stopping payments for the boy's support as soon as he learned the mother had married again, what was the other man's motive? He is financially able to provide, you say.

Boy's Father Means Mischief

OBVIOUSLY he was activated by psychopath cussedness or sadistic jealousy. He was taking a vicious thrust at this "very fine woman's" new-found happiness in stopping payments, meanly hoping that your father would also be mean enough to get riled up about it.

In brief, he was putting your dad to acid test on the score of decency, good sense, real manliness, etc., gambling on the chance that by jerking the pocketbook nerve he could ruin the marriage—as he has almost succeeded in doing; due to your father's short-sighted, hot tempered, gullible reaction.

Regardless of how the court decides,—and let's hope it isn't venally susceptible to organized pressure of law-flouting type,—the rascal has already derived much malicious satisfaction—just what he wanted—from your dad's agitated hell raising and the misery it visits on the lady. And in my opinion, your dad is a boob to play into his hands that way.

Turn Tables With Dignity

WHAT he should have done, and still should do, is to stand sincerely and with dignity on the premise that he considers it a privilege to rear this lad, son of the woman he loves, as if the boy were his very own—not only to make amends to the child for the bitter father's disloyalty to him, but also to give peace of mind to the good woman whose devotion gives such comfort to him.

Moreover, to turn the tables publicly on the rascally failure-father, and get his goat with superb finesse, your dad should send word to him through middleman channels that his financial help with the lad isn't wanted; that on sober second thought he (your dad) has decided that he wants to do the right thing by the boy; and do it himself,—which attitude should win more respect for your father in court than hours of legal dueling, incidentally.

FOR BEST SERVICE PLACE YOUR ADS EARLY

The steadily growing volume of classified ads in The Post, combined with the practice of many advertisers who phone late in the day, is making it difficult to devote the time and assistance to these late callers which is needed to prepare the most effective possible copy.

To assure receiving this help from your ad-taker, please try to call during the morning or early afternoon.

Tax Increase Is Discussed By Council

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 27.—The most drastic changes in Fredericksburg's tax structure ever proposed—and the highest taxes—were discussed by the city council last night in a preliminary conference on the 1948 budget.

The proposals call for a shift from the fixed scale of license taxes for business firms and professional persons to a sliding scale based on gross receipts.

In the case of the professions, the charge would be a minimum license of $25, plus 1 per cent on the first $10,000 of gross receipts and 1½ per cent on receipts over $10,000. This levy would affect printers, photographers, shoemakers, sign painters, undertakers, milk dealers, real estate agents, moving picture theaters and many others in addition to doctors, lawyers, dentists and other professionals. The basic tax on a number of these would be hiked sums ranging from $50 to $400 a year.

Previously the council had received a proposal that the real estate levy be increased from $1.50 to $1.60 per $100 of assessed valuation. Affecting virtually every householder and many firms would be a charge of $10 a year for garbage collection which the municipality has been doing free for the past 20 years.

Realty Assessment Protests Yield Owners Little Benefit

Protests by Montgomery residents over increased valuations on their homes and businesses are netting them little but a chance to give vent to their feelings.

Officials point out that every citizen has a right to protest formally the new assessment currently under way all over the county.

But, of the scores to date who have vehemently argued that their assessments are too high and the dozens more who pleaded that taxes and the cost of living are already too high, none has been successful in obtaining a lower assessment, officials say.

Francis K. Metzger, assistant supervisor of assessments for the county, said yesterday numerous adjustments of a minor nature have been made when technical information in the assessing office was found to be in error.

But, he said, the county commissioners, the final authority, have upheld all protested assessments to date.

Despite the protests, appeals filed with the State Tax Commission and suits filed in Montgomery County Circuit Court, the work is proceeding although somewhat behind schedule, Metzger disclosed.

All commercial, industrial and apartment properties have been assessed in the so-called Metropolitan Area (Silver Spring, Bethesda and Takoma Park) and reassessment of all residential properties is about 25 per cent completed, he declared.

Metzger said the commercial industrial and apartment reassessment added more than 19 million dollars to the county's tax roles. In that assessment, he said, some business properties were increased as much as 1000 per cent over the previous assessment.

Residential property assessments are running much lower with an average increase of about 15 per cent, according to Metzger. Reassessments on all properties are required by law every five years, he explained.

Explaining that the mission of the 10 man assessing force is one of "equalization and uniformity," Metzger also explains that homes are being assessed on the basis of the 1941 market, not on today's "inflationary" market.

When owners of the properties were notified of their new assessment, only about 2 per cent protested.

Fifteen owners of commercial property in Bethesda appealed unsuccessfully to the State Tax Commission and of those, seven have filed suits in Circuit Court which are pending.

Metzger said there are approximately 60,000 properties of all types in the county and the biggest assessing job is some 48,000 residential properties in the Metropolitan area.

Teacher Pay Hike Refused In Frederick

Frederick, Md., Nov. 27.—The Frederick County Board of Education has voted unanimously not to include in budget recommendations a $200 flat increase for teachers as requested last week by public school instructors.

Holding that there is greater need for funds for school construction at this time and pointing out that the teachers recently received substantial increases, the board members said they do not feel justified in approving a further salary increase for teachers at this time.

All teachers received salary increases, effective in September, bringing them up to the minimum State level. The request for a $200 flat increase was based largely on the contention that teachers in some other counties, including Washington County, are receiving salaries above the minimum figure.

The budget recommendations approved by the board and submitted to the county commissioners are based on total anticipated expenditures of $1,467,780 for 1948. Of this amount the commissioners are asked to appropriate $573,156, a decrease from last year. Of that sum $522,956 is asked for current expenses as compared to $615,000 recommended for 1947.

From State and other sources, it is anticipated that $894,624 will be available for 1948. Current expenses for the year would run $1,364,455 of which the State would provide $841,499.

League Hits A. E. Frisbie Appointment

Appointment of Alfred E. Frisbie to the Arlington County Board was sharply criticized yesterday in a statement by the Arlington Better Government League.

A statement adopted by the league at a Wednesday night meeting called Judge Walter T. McCarthy's appointment "another example of the exercise of the vast political and nonjudicial powers of our circuit judge."

The league felt the appointment should have gone to A. Oscar Smith, who received the third highest vote of nine candidates in the election of two board members November 4.

McCarthy appointed Frisbie Tuesday to fill a vacancy caused by the death November 3 of Board Member Leo Lloyd. The appointment was received favorably by County Board Chairman Basil M. De Lashmutt and by members of the Greater Arlington Association. The Better Government League referred to Frisbie as "a member of the Democratic Executive Committee who handed out literature at the polls for the Greater Arlington Association in the recent nonpartisan election of school board and county board members.

League President Harley M. Williams said his association will seek legislation to take from the Circuit Court judge such non-judicial county functions as appointment of policemen, zoning board, tax reassessment board, electoral board, finance board, and pension board.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Trying to Rent an Apartment? Here's News for You

The following letter is being published merely as a point of information for thousands of apartment-seeking District Liners:

"Almost two years ago," writes Anne Snyder of Tremont Gardens, Falls Church, Va., "we applied for an apartment at Parkfairfax.

"Repeated inquiries brought the response that our turn had not yet come. But after 16 months, we got a different answer.

"We were told that our application had been removed from the active file after 12 months, and that we were no longer being considered for an apartment."

T. C. Campbell, manager of Parkfairfax, explains the development's policy this way:

"When we're able to accommodate an applicant, he usually moves in within a year of the time he applies.

"To keep our files current, we must therefore assume that after a year an unsuccessful applicant has found housing elsewhere; and for that reason, we remove his name from our active file.

"We regret that we cannot undertake to notify everybody on the list of such decisions.

"And neither can we accept new applications from people who are already adequately housed."

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. Dorothy D. Reid, Manassas, Va.: Thanks for the clipping about the "fur cars" that were stolen. Another District Liner got it in with the previous mail. Mighty alert, these Washington Post readers.

Samuel H. Gale, 15 Riggs rd. ne.: Glad you don't storm about our mistakes, or tell us we're all wet, Sam. We prefer Gales of laughter.

HE'S ONLY KIDDING (I HOPE)

As I gaze expectantly
Upon your daily column,
I turn away despondently—
Your humor leaves me solemn.

Bernard Alcabes of 4910 Arkansas ave. nw. hastens to explain:

"Actually, I enjoy the column immensely. It just happens that these were the only thoughts that I could put together quickly, in rhyme."

You don't sound very convincing, Bernard—but I prefer to believe you.

SOUR HOUSING NOTE

Checking through our classified ads, Mrs. M. A. Batnick of 2815 31st st. se. finds mention of a house which boasts a "fireplace in bath."

"What," muses Mrs. Batnick, "will they think of next?"

MISCELLANY

Local radio listeners will remember WINX's Ernie Simon, who enlisted in the British Army when war broke out, and won a Victoria Cross serving under "Monty" in North Africa. According to WJJD's ad in current trade magazines, Ernie is now "Chicago's most talked-about radio personality" . . . That dazzling new taxi with push-button doors and windows is a 1947 Lincoln owned by Byron E. Copeland of 3702 1st st. se. Byron says that as far as he knows, it's the first of its kind in cab service here . . . Karen Kruse contends that little Laura Nathan was not the first to coin the word "nokay," and says that the Reader's Digest credited the invention to Vishinsky or one of the other Russians some time ago. However, Laura is in the clear on this one, because she's not old enough to read yet . . . Mrs. John L. Ford of 5511 43d pl., Hyattsville, Md., calls our attention to another new word, which appeared in the comic strip "Smokey Stover" in last Sunday's Washington Post. The mating of two felines was described as "catrimony."

HE'S MINTING ON THE GOLD STANDARD

"Here's a bit of brand new coinage out of the word-mint you've recently founded," writes W. G. Brandstadt of 1901 Wyoming ave. nw. "I hope it's up to standard.

"This word describes the kind of weather we've had recently. It's 'drismal'."

Here's another new word for our collection, this one coined by Mrs. Edith Woodruff, secretary to Representative Carl Hinshaw of California.

"Constituents" is one of the most overworked words in a Congressman's vocabulary. But it doesn't specify the sex of the voter.

So Mrs. Woodruff has decided that henceforth all males shall be known as "constituents," and all females as "constituwenches."

RED HOT RECIPE

Ewart Hobbs of Box 5478, Seat Pleasant, Md., observes that a recipe in a recent edition of my favorite newspaper advised housewives to mix:

"One pound hamburger, two tablespoons of chopped onions, and two tablespoons of chopped green paper."

Those who prefer red papers can chop up two tablespoons of The Daily Worker.

I wish that I could write about
The things great poets do;
The starry night, the vesper breeze,
The autumn skies so blue.

* * * *

But if I did compose an ode
That sang a song so fine,
Such masterpiece would never make
The darned old District Line.
Jay Aitch.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK—Andre Philip, the French Finance Minister who heads the delegation to the International Trade Conference in Havana, was in New York yesterday en route to Cuba. In 1942 Philip was Dean at the University of Lyon and also conducted several courses suited to his talents. The first was a course in statistics, a practical course in which he read to the students a list of all the products on the trains passing through the city of Lyon each day.

A police inspector, studying for his law doctorate, got high marks because he paid heed only to the studies. The others paid heed to the more important study—the tip-off to the Resistance on which trains had to be sabotaged.

One afternoon Professor Philip decided to take over the lecture on ancient Greek history. Fifteen minutes earlier a Vichy official addressed the students about the scrap-metal drive, and read to them a statement from Petain giving assurance that the scrap-metal was needed by the loyal Frenchmen and would not be turned over to the Nazis. . . .

The students at the University of Lyon established the lowest record in the scrap-metal drive. For after the Vichy men left, Professor Philip started his lecture by reading from a book on the Roman occupation of Greece. He quoted the part about the Greek chief who asked the people to contribute products and promised that none would go to the Romans "but too late did they discover that the faith was broken and the products went to the Romans."

A delegation of Arab Communist leaders visited Henry Wallace during his trip to Palestine and told him that the Arab masses, led by the Red Party, will fight by force against the creation of a Jewish state. "Does that mean you would encourage warfare against the Jews?" asked Wallace. The Red leader told him: "Oh, no. We are for Arab-Jewish cooperation." Wallace then asked: "How do you reconcile those two statements?" and the Red Arab replied: "Aha. That's what we call dialectical materialism."

Later, in Aman, Wallace lunched with King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan who told him, "I hope you'll be President of the United States." Wallace asked: "Why?" and the King explained: "If only so that I'll be able to say that I've had a President in my house."

The rule-book for the Rachmaninoff Fund piano auditions, which offers the richest prize in music, will list a choice of repertoire and a warning that the only piece of music which contestants must not play is Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C Sharp Minor" . . .

Oswald Jacoby, the bridge champ, will start writing a three-times-a-week syndicated column on gin rummy starting January 1 . . .

for a Christmas long remembered

For that very special someone on any Christmas list . . . a Hamilton Watch . . . America's fine watch . . . America's fine gift.

Hamilton Watches for men and women, with 17 or more jewels, are priced from $52.25 upward.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Senate Republicans Blast Taft

By Drew Pearson

The last secret meeting of the Senate Republican Policy Committee was one of the most significant in years. It showed that a new movement has developed within the Republican Party, led by new Senators who believe that constructive action rather than destructive criticism must be the future policy of the GOP.

J. S. COOPER

By careful interviews with the Senators participating in this important meeting, the following play-by-play account of the closed-door session can be given.

Senator John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky, who last year won out in a normally Democratic State, fired the first gun against the GOP leadership by pointing to the recent Republican gubernatorial defeat in Kentucky. Many farmers who normally vote Republican, he said, had stayed away from the polls.

"We'll have the same situation in 1948 unless we start showing some results in this Congress," declared Cooper. "The farmers, at least in my State, are not satisfied with the record of the Republican Party so far. If we want to hold on to the farm vote, we've got to get busy on a positive program of recovery, instead of finding fault with what the Democrats offer."

Taft Pooh-Poohs

"Oh, I don't think that was the reason," pooh-poohed Taft, patently stung by his freshman colleague's candor. "The farmers are satisfied with present prices. Also, they are prospering, which probably accounted for the small farm vote in Kentucky. When people are prospering and have nothing to kick about, they're not too interested in elections."

This brought a quick retort from freshman GOP-er Edward Thye of Minnesota, himself a farmer.

"With all due respect to my colleague, he can't be very familiar with conditions in agricultural States, or he wouldn't have said that," asserted Thye. "The reason farmers are not enthusiastic goes much deeper than the Senator's explanation."

For one thing, Thye contended, many farmers felt that the GOP Congress had been indifferent to their needs and had, in fact, attempted to scuttle some portions of the Government's farm program. (He probably referred to reclamation funds that vitally affect the economy of 17 farm States.)

For another thing, the former Governor of Minnesota added, farmers in general—except wheat producers—were not satisfied with current prices, despite Taft's contention to the contrary. With the high cost of living, dairy farmers are netting less now than they were under OPA controls, because of high labor and grain-feed costs, which comprise about 60 per cent of the cost of producing milk.

The gross receipts of dairy farmers are greater than last year, Thye continued, but their net profits are less, due to these high operational expenses.

Taft's Own Committee

The usually quick-spoken Taft didn't pursue the argument. He also showed an uncustomary meekness when GOP Senators Ralph Flanders of Vermont and Ray Baldwin of Connecticut jumped him for his premature tirade against Truman's message.

The Ohioan was on a bad spot here because a subcommittee of the Joint Committee on the President's Economic Report, which Taft heads, had issued a report indorsing most of Truman's recommendations exactly two days before the President addressed Congress.

In fact, the real inside story is that Truman based his message largely on this report, written—after an exhaustive survey of living costs in the Eastern United States—by Flanders and Baldwin, together with Democratic Senator Francis Myers of Pennsylvania and Representatives Robert Rich (R., Pa.), Clarence Kilburn (R., N. Y.) and Edward Hart (D., N. J.).

The subcommittee report clashed with the Truman message only on one vital point—the President's request for full powers to invoke rationing, price and wage controls. Flanders, the subcommittee chairman, and his colleagues had advocated "limited" compulsory rationing on scarce foodstuffs, if voluntary rationing failed. Also, they opposed price controls, though admitting that price controls were linked closely to allocation controls on key commodities—another Truman request.

But in all other respects—proposed controls of rents, exports, transportation, installment buying, commodity exchanges, etc., plus selective rationing—the Flanders recommendations were almost identical to those of Truman.

In polite, but firm tones, the Vermont Senator, an experienced businessman and manufacturer, reminded Taft of this. He also reminded Taft that he had, in effect, run out on his own committee by sounding off as he did. There might have been no objections if Taft had spoken as an "individual" instead of trying to commit the whole Republican Party to his views, said Flanders.

How Long a Visit

A visit should be long enough . . . To make the time worth while . . . Not merely something to exchange . . . A handshake and a smile . . . It should endure sufficiently . . . For friendliness and cheer . . . To take possession of the heart . . . And fill the atmosphere . . . There ought to be politeness and . . . A willingness to share . . . The conversation or debate . . . With everybody there . . . And whether it is business or . . . Another social call . . . There should be no display of wrath . . . Or jealousy at all . . . A visit should be measured by . . . The goal it would achieve . . . But visitors should always go . . . When it is time to leave.
